BLISTERING BARNACLES

Inlogrames have just announced their intention of bringing Belgium's most famous son to the world of home computers. We refer, of course, not to Eddie Merckx but to that 1930s comic book hero Tin Tin who fought the good fight for freedom and justice in dozens of adventures, armed only with a cowlick, a pair of plus fours and his sharp wit, and accompanied by an unforgettable crew of friends and allies, including the dipsomaniac Captain Haddock (favourite term of abuse: "bash-bazook"). The absent-minded scientific genius Professor Calculus and, of course, his faithful pooch Snowy.

According to an Inlogrames spokesperson, their game will be based on perhaps the best known

Tin Tin adventure: "Explorers On The Moon", in which our young hero and his entourage travel to our nearest celestial neighbour.

Tin Tin will be making his computer debut in time for Christmas on the Amiga, with a 64 version planned to follow in due course. And to mark this truly charming licence, Inlogrames have very kindly offered to donate five copies of the original comic book versions of both "Explorers On The Moon" and its sequel "Journey To The Moon" to the first five CU readers who can correctly name the two completely useless detective twins who crop up throughout the Tin Tin adventures. Entries to Tin Tin Compo, Commodore User, Priory Court, 30-32 Farringdon Lane, London EC1R 3AU.

DOMARK TIES UP ATARI

Domark have just announced the signing of a major licensing agreement with coin-op giant Atari which will result in eight of their top arcade games being converted for the home market by Domark over the next three years.

The first of the eight games to appear will be the excellent futuristic tank basher 'em up Vindicators which should be on the shelves of your local software stockist in the first quarter of 1989. Subsequent releases will include the hysterical cops n' robbers driving game APB, Xybots, Dragon Spirit and — a big leave with Buzz — Toober, which for those who missed the CU arcade review a couple of months back, is at present the second most enjoyable pastime we know of involving a rubber inner tube.

All eight games will be released under the Tengen name (Atari's licensing company) though marketing is being handled by Domark.

COIN-OP SIGNINGS

Activision have just added frenzied brilliant oriental hack 'em up Spirit Ninja (see review this lab) to their roster of arcade licences. Meanwhile Fil have announced one further title to add to the eight already announced, with the acquisition of the conversion rights to SNK's Heavy Barrel. All nine of their coin-op signings will be appearing on their newly established Rebel label.

BITMAPS BACK

Having young design team The Bitmap Brothers have committed themselves to producing three further games for Image Works.

They've already released one smash 16-bit title in Xenon (through Mastertronic) and their debut for Image Works, Speedball, on early sightings look set to repeat its forerunner's success. The first of the new Bitmap/Image Works collaborations should be with us early next year. While Image Works refused to confirm or deny the suggestion, it seems likely that one of the three games will be a follow-up to Xenon.

INCENTIVE TOTALLY ECLIPSED

If you're a fan of Incentive's pet gameplay system Freescape, you'll be happy to hear that a third sample of the genre is on its way. Total Eclipse is set in 1930 in Egypt. Your task this time is to save the world from the wrath of Ra the sun god who's decided to blow up the moon, thereby causing an ecological disaster.

You're armed with a revolver, water bottle, compass and watch, and you'd better be on your toes as you wander through the pyramids avoiding poison darts, ancient mummies, hidden trapdoors and the like. Sounds more like Indiana Jones Part III than another descendant of Diner, but no doubt Freescape will work its magic as effectively amongst the sands of the Nile as it did in outer space.

NO EXCUSES FROM ARCANA

Screen-bit specialists Arcana are set for upward mobility with the impending release of No Excuses, a game calculated to exercise the minds of anybody whose ultimate ambition is to be Big In The City. According to a spokesperson for the spy training software house, this series of 50 psychological tests "really is of fundamental importance for the business person with high ambitions who wishes to, er, undergo tutorial instruction in the home."

An accurate assessor of your Gordon Gekko ambitions or the product of a weird "sense of humour"? Decide for yourself—it's due out on the Amiga shortly.

CAVEMAN UGH- LYMPICS

While Egypt is elsewhere demonstrating their latest product, Electronic Arts have produced a less serious look at the idea of competition that our Neanderthal great-grandfathers might have competed in. Featuring such delightfully ridiculous events as dino-vaulting and wave-throwing, Caveman Ugh-Lympics looks like the perfect antidote for anybody suffering from a Seoul overdose. And not as much as a single Tyrannosaurus Stereol in this 64 version, either).

SHOOT OUT

Is this Western you play Quick Hand Lulu, a travelling social worker with the task of helping the elderly citizens of Gulch Creek... just joking. It's a blast 'em up, of course. Blow Dusty's gang off to the happy hunting grounds, but try to avoid doing away with too many innocent townsfolk. Shoot Out should be out on night-bit any second.

WEIRD DREAMS

Soon to be released from Rainbird, Weird Dreams, as its names suggests, drops you right into the middle of a nightmare. Having drifted into this Dali-esque world where inanimate objects become animate and carnivorous, you must solve a series of intricate puzzles to make your way back into sanity (if you were ever there at all, that is).

IRON LORD

New from French software house Ubisoft Iron Lord—The Crusader of Justice places you in the chivalric mail of a prince who returns from the Crusades to find his father the king deposed by his brutal uncle. To recover the throne you'll have to make your way through the spy-and-assassin-ridden land raising an army. This medieval adventure will be available in early '89. Meanwhile, you'll have to be content with this Amiga screen shot.

BUZZ

POSTMAN PAT

What must surely be the arcade licence of the year has gone budget softco. Alternative in the form of that amiable bespectacled, mail bearer from children's TV, 'Postman Pat'. The game is due for a Christmas release and we're promised it will appeal to serious gamers. Does Postman Pat drive an armoured mail van with twin bazookas and chain wheels then? Altogether now 'Postman Pat, Postman Pat Postman Pat and his black and white cat

JUNGLE BOOK

CHEW THIS OVER

Following US A&E's announcement of a marketing tie-in with Pepsi, Gremlin Graphics have announced a deal with Chewits to put the sweet on their The Monster game. Chewits have reciprocated by carrying information about the game on every packet of the chewsome sweets between now and April which they reckon should amount to some 6 1/2 million packets.

Gremlin are so made up about the whole business they've decided to offer five lucky CU readers the chance to lose all their teeth by the time they're twenty with a packet of Chewits a day for year. That's 365 packets each! Just send us a postcard with your name and address to Chewy Compo, CU, 30-32 Farringdon Lane, London EC1R 3AU. The first five out the bag get the sweets (and, probably, fillings)

Wall Disney's classic animated interpretation of Kipling's Jungle Book is due to appear on 16 bit next year after UK marketing company signed the licence for French software house Coktel Vision. So expect a suitably Gallic interpretation of the life and times of Baloo, Kaa (the beady eyed snake), Sheri Khan and of course, Mowgli. Maen, or dig that crazy bear, daddy!

IN EXXOS

Following the success of Captain Blood, the programming team responsible, headed up by Philip Lynch and Didier Bouchon have set up their own subsidiary label within the Infogrames organisation in order, according to Infogrames' 'to reproduce some other games of a similar level of originality'.

The new label, which will be called Exxon, boasts a curious motto: "ata ata hoglu hulu". Nope, it's not French or Swahili but, apparently, a mantra chanted by those in charge of Infogrames before their board meetings! The follow-up to Captain Blood will be released early in the New Year and is likely to be Art Attack. Other releases planned include such karmically meaningful titles as The Temple of Flying Saucers, Egg and Psymon. Well, all we can say is turn on, boot up and drop out, masan.

EXPLODING FIST +

Whether prompted by System 3's recent release of International Karate - or not, we have no idea, but Firebird's Exploding Fist returns you to the classic beat 'em up, with a choice of you and a mate taking on the computer or you facing a brace of computer-generated foes on your own. Make it through the initial stage and you've got to defend yourself against ninja attack by judicious use of poison darts. Exploding Fist is out on the 64 this December.

PAPERBOY

One of the most eagerly awaited conversions to 16 bit must be the Atari classic, Paperboy. So it's with great glee that we tell you Elite are putting the final touches to the obstacle-littered world of Paperboy where dogs, cars, CS's and even Death crawl in a quiet US suburb. Still no handle bars in the packaging though...

MARTECH BLAST OFF

Serendipitous times indeed! What with US Gold's Thunderblade and Activision's Afterburner set to dominate much of the pre-Christmas column inches, it's with interest that we note two press releases from Martech heralding the imminent release of a brace of aerial combat games, one of which seizes you in a "ghostly fighter" and describes itself as "a stupendous, state of the arts (sic) seek and destroy arcade combat game", the other being a "gripping new mega miles per hour arcade simulation of a Supercobra attack helicopter".

Phantom Fighter and Helifire are due for release in December and November respectively. The chopper game will be available on both 64 and Amiga, but Phantom Fighter, programmed by a new Irish programming team Emerald Software, will only be available for the 16-bit machines.

THUNDERBLADE

With Sega having provided them with last year's runaway Christmas Number One in Out Run, US Gold were obviously keen to try and collar another state of the art coin-op for this year's Spend, Spend, Spend season. Unlike 1987, however, this year has thrown up more than one strong contender for "Coin-op Of The Year", with the likes of Afterburner, Operation Wolf, R-Type and Double Dragon all scoring with arcade fans. Nevertheless, in shelling out for Sega's dedicated helicopter simulator-cum-blast blasting Thunderblade US Gold have staked their money on a strong title.

Thunderblade places you in the seat of a fast-moving combat helicopter blasting your way through four levels of obstacles and enemies. Each level is split into two graphically-separate stages, the first flips you into a view-from-above assault over ground and sea, whilst in the second part you fly head-on through cities, underground caverns and ocean skies, dodging skyscrapers, stalagmites and the missiles of countless enemy tanks, fighters and helicopters.

US Gold signed up the rights for what they coyly describe as "a lot of money" last February, so by the time Thunder- blade hits the shops on the day they'll have had nearly ten months to try and cram this impressive game onto the various home formats. The 64 version is being programmed by Chris Butler, whose previous work includes 720, while the Amiga conversion is being carried out by John Prince and Donald Campbell, the team that brought you the likes of Indiana Jones, Infiltrator and Ace of Aces.

Nope, you're not going to get the brilliant hydraulics of the deluxe arcade version included in the packaging - but then again Ocean aren't going to be handling out Uzi's with Operation Wolf. What you will get, we hope, is an accurate representation of the addictive stop-start gameplay of the original. And if you do, Thunderblade will be an essential addition to every 64 and Amiga owning blast 'em up fan's software library.

B U Z Z

ROBOCOP

Based on the futuristic movie in which a badly mauled American police officer gets reconstructed as a superhuman cybernoid, Ocean's conversion of Robocop will be hoping to puff up all the competition over the yuletide. Uniquely, Ocean signed all the rights to the movie, including coin-op rights, before it had even been completed, and then they subsequently sold Data East the rights to produce the arcade game, nearly upending the usual conventions. What you're looking at here is, in fact, the resulting coin-op, already released in the States.

CRYSTAL MIGHTY

Purveyors of line gaming implements, Powerplay have just unveiled the latest addition to their growing line, the Crystal.

Two Crystal sticks are available: the Standard crystal sticks at £14.99, and the Turbo Crystal, with fast auto-fire, at £16.99. Both joysticks are fully microswitched, and should be available by the time you read this.

Powerplay are also giving away Cruiser sticks in a CU compo on page 77 of this very mag, in which one lucky reader gets to play with an Amiga. Check it out!

OUT RUN

If you weren't impressed by any of the recent crop of racing games then you're probably seeing your dash for last year's Christmas biggie, Out Run in its 16-bit form. Here's an exclusive shot and, we're promised, it features sampled sounds of a Ferrari doing a wheel spin and a set of keys going into the ignition. Conversion house Probe promise that it's going to be "brilliant". We well will breathe

SHINOBI

Cop a look at this: it's the first glance at the Amiga version of Shinobi, due for release by newly-converted PC publisher, Robot, in the pre-Christmas period. Converted from the excellent Sega coin-op, Shinobi stars a classic oriental warrior who makes his way through several intensely-drawn levels crammed with enemies to slay, then on back to death, and re-run-out-of-life lookups to resume. With such quality as one of level showdowns with fire-breathing Karate-type characters and a stunning shooting range bonus level, Shinobi looks like it'll be the business.

ROCKET RANGER

They said it couldn't be done: well, actually they didn't, but they'd (whatever they might be) still find it hard to believe just how faithful Cinemaware have managed to keep their 64 version of the brilliantly camp wartime sci-fi spoof Rocket Ranger to the preceding Amiga version. But don't take our word for it — check out this official screen shot. Or better still, check out the whole game on its release.

OPERATION WOLF

When it was released late last year CU described Op Wolf as being "set to blow the arcades to pieces". It's done all that we expected and more, but there were still eyebrows raised when Ocean announced they had secured the licence to it. "What are they going to do, give a way an Uzi with every copy?" said one journa. Of course not, but those wily Ocean folk recognised that the gun mounted on the front of the cabinet wasn't the game's main attraction — that was down to the frenetic gameplay. The answer was to have a scrolling gun sight, something which Cabot has proved is perfectly workable and entertaining in the arcades at this very moment.

What Operation Wolf has to have to succeed is the feel of the coin-op and the graphic sharpness. Our free demo cassette should leave you in no doubt that they've captured that with a vengeance.

The 64 version was programmed in-house by Colin Parch with graphics by Steve Wohid. The Amiga version, currently approaching completion, is being programmed in France and, we're told, they've managed to squeeze the arcade graphics into the 16 bit wundermaschine. Both versions should be in the shops from the week beginning 21st November.

FREE CU TIN' MASTER

EXCELERON

Side 2 of our giveaway cassette contains a complete game, not a clipped out re-release of an old flap, but a brand new shoot 'em up programmed especially for the occasion by newcomers Video Images.

The Scunthorpe based company of three claims to be the youngest development house in the country — and with some justification — their average age is nineteen.

The team comprises of Dave Colley, Dave Bradley and Dean Hicklingbottom who organize the projects, some of the graphics, design and co-ordination. Excelexon itself was coded by Kevin Lawrence who programmed Sidekick for Firebird a few years back.

Video Images are currently doing conversion work for Midasgic on 16 bit and one of the first projects you'll see from them is the Amiga and ST versions of Bengkok Knights, which will feature code from a relative unknown, Andy Fowler (who received dozens of offers after he wrote an ST demo of Undum).

Look out early next year for a special CU Amiga game.

Instructions:

Side A —

Operation Wolf — Press SHIFT RUN/STOP and press PLAY on datasette to load the demo.

This is a scrolling demo of Level 1. Pick up extra ammunition, health points and rockets by shooting the symbols concealed around the screen. Avoid shooting innocent villagers or medical personnel.

Side B

Excelexon — Press SHIFT RUN/STOP and press PLAY on datasette to load the game.

Excelexon is a parallax shoot 'em up for one or two players, the idea being to collect the six pieces of shield from around the outside planets which will allow you to then go to the middle planet. If you get past that level then you will be allowed to take on the final confrontation on LEVEL 8. Control is joystick only.

WIN A COLOUR T.V.

CU ompo

It's not as good as winning an Op Wolf coin-op, but you have to admit they're a bit impractical. Can you see your mum letting you stick it in the corner of the living room and offering the vicar a go when he comes round?

What we do have to give away, thanks to those philanthropic chaps at Ocean, is a rather nice colour TV with that all important remote control box so's you don't have to crawl out of bed on Saturday morning to switch on Saint and Greavsle (you slob — Ed).

Twenty-five slightly less lucky runners-up can expect to receive copies of Operation Wolf.

What do you have to do to win? Well, you can either send us £100 pounds in used fivers, employ the skills of medium, eebotege the poet so no-one else's entry gets through, or answer these three teasers:

- 1) Which comedian stars as DJ, Adrien Cronauer, in 'Good morning Vietnam'?
- 2) What is the name of the Colonel in the Rembo movies?
- 3) Which country did the Uzi sub-machine gun originate from?

Answers on a blood-stained dog tag to: Wolt Compo, CU, 30-32 Farringdon Lane, London EC1R 3AU. Don't forget to state whether you own an Amiga or a 64 so we know what to send you should you be a runner-up. Competition closes Nov 18th.

A LEGEND IN GAMES SOFTWARE

SCREEN SCENE

CU

This is where the reviews start and in common with the rest of mag things have changed. Don't worry, CU will still maintain the high standards it has set for assessing games and it'll still be done in an entertaining and witty style. What has changed though is the look of the pages, and more importantly the way we cover games.

The Amiga reviews will figure throughout the magazine, rather than in a section of their own — that's because we believe both machines now merit the same degree of coverage. Owners of 8 bit machines are interested in what's happening for 16 bit machines whilst Amiga owners can expect many of the 64 games they see to be converted. We'll cater equally for both groups by giving you updates and telling you whether and when other versions can be expected. Where games are released simultaneously we'll review both together with a selection of screen shots.

We'll also be looking to help you out with more information in the form of starting hints, background detail and technical data.

The other obvious change is the score panel. This has been streamlined in a way which really helps you decide just how we rate a game. There are now just four categories we're interested in: graphics, sound, playability and suitability. Playability simply refers to how addictive and well-designed a game is, and suitability refers to the enduring appeal of a game — are you going to clock it in an hour? Is it too boring?

Finally the scores are represented by percentages. With the high quality of releases on both formats now, we feel that marks out of ten are simply too restricting, so games will now be marked out of 100. Anything which scores between 85% and 92% merits a ScreenStar, and anything that receives between 93% and 100% merits a SuperStar. Now what about the people giving the scores...?

NICK KELLY

Lead singer and songwriter with The Fat Lady Sings (The Fat Lad Whinges as they're known here), Nick hails from Dublin and mainly handles the arcade reviews, though he turns to the home machines once or twice an issue.

Most of Nick's spare time (and indeed much of his work time too) is taken up with the band, but in moments of quietude he enjoys whacking Mike P at tennis and eating Japanese food.

His favourite game avar, is Wizzball on the Amiga, R-Type in the arcades and Paperboy. Basically, he says, "nothing too intellectually straining." Quite right too.

STEVE JARRATT

Another Newsfield reject, no really. Steve just joined CU after a brief period as a freelance Ex editor of Crash, Steve, and not a lot of people know this is, was an industrial chemist before he took to the typewriter.

His pastimes include ten pin bowling, transpotting. (Oh! That's a complete up! — SJ) and painting. Look out for those maps.

Bubble Bobble just has to be his fava game avar, along with Star Wars on the ST (just a minute... Ed) and Mercenary which he rates as the best game ever written. What a boring fart.

MIKE PATTENDEN

The Ed, of course. When he's not letting Nick Kelly win at tennis Mike is playing or watching football. He's a season ticket holder at Wael Ham and plays Sunday League football (at which he's totally brilliant — Ed). His favourite games are dalmatyls of the arcade variety with sport sims and shoot 'em ups figuring highly. His bestest game ever has to be Operation Wolf, but he also likes the odd pinball machine as well, particularly Party Animal.

KEN MACMAHON

Known to many software companies as Ken the Bastard because of his unkind reviews, Ken is not a man to suffer poor software gladly. It was he who gave the infamous Ninja Master zero when he reviewed it, almost causing World War III in the process. Ken will review anything as long as he's paid for it, but he's well into flight sims and games with depth — like Silent Service (is that supposed to be funny? Ed).

TONY DILLON

Heavy metal mutha TD, a young man carefully breeding a pot belly despite his tender years. He enjoys most types of games (he rates Elite as his number one fave), but he's particularly keen on the role playing variety as well.

MARK PATTERSON

Despite being an Arsenal fan Mark's quite a nice chap really. He's just become a staff member, joining as copy chaser, though we reckon it's just a way of getting hold of our Amiga. Like TD he's a fan of role playing games and rates the Bard's Tale series as being the best games he's ever played.

BOHDAN BUCIAK

CU's ex Dap Ed runs a desk-top publishing company with Ken McMahon. If anyone's ever wondered quite how he got that name it's because he's of Ukrainian descent. So now you know. Bohd' as he's affectionately known is well into Microprose style sims and racing games.

Go lower down, then to go . .

bonus on the next tower

The addictive qualities of this game are literally phenomenal; all you need are a few quick goes and you're hooked — like the majority of the CU team seem to be at the Recently, Hewson have been assaulting the Amiga market with some great releases such as Zynaps and Cybermod. This trend now continues with the release of Nebulus.

NEBULUS

When I first saw Nebulus it was on the Spectrum, and at the time I didn't think too much of it. But now after playing the 64 and Amiga versions I can safely say I've been hooked on one of the most addictive games of all time.

The basic idea is simply to try and make it to the top of each tower; but it's the route you take that's the problem. Firstly, there is only one real path, and from here on in the strategy is like a heavy sort of chess, but far more devious. To progress up the tower you need to use platforms, lifts and doorways. The problem with doorways is that unless you're an experienced player you never quite know where you're going to end up: in a better position or in the drink. Lifts are straightforward green man-cars, although they can also lead to some rather nasty knocks on the head. The platforms also contain pitfalls such as the annoying habit of vaporising under your feet or being gassed just as you bypass a particularly nasty alien, forcing you back into it.

Each tower scrolls rotationally as well as vertically and mastering the mild concept of this idea is half the key to being successful in your approach. If you come across a lift which is blocked by a destructible platform that cannot be shot from where you stand, an alternative route is required to bring you onto the same height as the block. As long as the block is in range of your killer snowballs, you can clear the block, scurry back to your first position, and use the lift in safety.

Other problems require avoiding some really nasty meaties. I say nasty because they go one step further than actually killing you, they knock you down a level or two on the tower you're on. This may not sound much but after struggling for ages on a particularly difficult bit with precious time slipping away, this can be agonisingly painful.

Between each tower is a bonus level where you, in the guise of your little puggy man, happily blast away at marine life, encasing fish in bubbles and collecting them for a time

In a game with as limited a field of play as Nebulus the graphics have been produced extremely well. When you start, the base of the tower and the nasties are realistically reflected in the water below, and the sky is beautifully graded using around 60 colours on-screen. Clever stuff, eh?

Sampled sound effects are abundant, though not exactly the most amazing I've ever heard. Still, the sound is suitable when set against the cute, pug-nosed main sprite and those annoying aliens, one of which enters with a dry wheezing cough!

Nebulus is going to be one hell of a game to complete, but then it's going to be one hell of a game to put down again — probably one of the most addictive games ever to be released anywhere (honestly). In fact it should carry a health warning, the amount of times people have nearly thumped the Amiga (Jerritt) or a wall for that matter has to get a mention. Ultimately, it's a mentally stimulating, reflex testing, light hearted game that must rank as one of the best ever releases.

WIZARD WARS

The game that takes fantasy role playing one step further

Well that's what it says here. What it fails to state is in which direction. And for that fact it's not so much FRP, in fact all we have here is a basic fantasy arcade adventure. Stand it shoulder to shoulder with The Bard's Tale and Wizard Wars loses by an instant KO.

Your aim is to become the greatest wizard in all the land, and to achieve this you have to go around being as violent as possible, blasting off magic left right and centre, decapitating spiders, ghouls and other wizards.

Stretched over a mind-numbing three levels, your little waz has to collect spells, trinkets and magic items to help turn him from the werlock equivalent of a .22 pea shooter into a cruise missile.

The wizard has three ratings, phy, spl and men each corresponding to a set of spells. Casting the appropriate spell reduces x amount of points from that particular stat until it's depleted or death occurs.

The spells come in two categories — offense and defence (hud, hud — Ed). An offensive spell can be something like a fireball or mind blast, costing different amounts of points and causing a set amount of damage. The defensive spells can be forms of shield, flying, speed or teleporting spells.

Level one is quite simple: kill the monsters and return their treasure to the appropriate town. Level two instigates the 'choose your own monster' option, whereby you cycle through a list of monsters, select the one you wish to fight and then attempt to duff it up.

Finally you're transported to the castle of the seven mages, whereby you're set upon by the first of the rival wizards, a Wolf Lord. Your wizard's attritures at the edge of the screen are well-defined cameos of your adversaries, which is more than I can say for the monsters themselves, which are the same spite as the main character, bar the colour of their cloak.

Take my advice — after all that's what I'm here for — and keep away from this one.

This is the one, kids. Bombuzal is the singular, most exciting, highly involved and incredibly realistic guide-the-blob-around-the-exploding-tiles game that I've played this week. Well, maybe that's not so much of an accolade, but that's alright because Bombuzal isn't a very good game.

You are the mad Bomber. You live to explode bombs. Your entire being craves the smell of gunpowder, the flash of the fuse, the shock of the explosion, the taste of blood and all the rest of it. You live on an odd little world made up of lots of little flat plains. Each plain is made up of tiles, some dangerous, some not.

You spend all of your life running around on these tiles.

BOMB

AMIGA Screen Scene

Bombuzal bombs out

Should you decide to try something completely different (e.g. run off the tiles) then you plummet to your death, some six inches below.

Your mission (if you can call it that) is to detonate all the bombs on each level by running up to them, priming them, and then running away before they explode in your face. As the bombs explode, they take some tiles away with them, the number directly proportional to the size of the bomb. A small bomb will only destroy the tile it's on and will trigger any bombs within one tile on any of the bomb's four sides. A large bomb, however, wipes out all the tiles within a three tile radius and detonates any bombs within one tile out of that area. Get your bombs in the right place, and you can set off a chain reaction that can wipe out the whole level, with you included. So be careful!

It all that isn't exciting enough for you, there's lots more thrown in, just to get your shoes quivering. Different sorts of tiles, for example. There's your normal OK-to-stand-on tile which can be blown up by an explosion. Slotted tiles do all the same stuff as the normal tiles but have an extra special capability. Any bombs on a slotted tile can be picked up and moved to adjacent slotted tiles. On a screen that has slotted tiles, you can be pretty sure that you're going to have to do some shifting.

A riveted tile is OK to walk on and won't be destroyed by an explosion. Cracked tiles disappear as soon as you step off them, so always make sure that you want to walk across it before you do, because once you do, there's no turning back. Iced tiles make you lose control.

On top of that, there are swell bombs. No, not bombs that are nice to American persons, but bombs that change size from small to large, each size doing varying amounts of damage. A bomb is scattered about on some later levels. Trigger one off, and all the bombs on that level go off.

Power temples can be found too. Should a bomb go off next to one, it sucks in the force of the blast, preventing it from destroying tiles and detonating other bombs. Teleports transport you all over the shop. A spinner is there to ensure that you don't spend too much time on the starting square. After a short amount of time, it will push you off the square you're on in a random direction. Switches also lie around, which change parts of the level you're on.

Phew! I wipe the sweat from my brow. Imagine, all that in one game. I bet you can't wait to play it, but hang on, there's more! You can play in a 2D overhead view or a 3D isometric perspective view.

The graphics are large and cute, but nothing to write home about. The animation on the other hand, if you can call it animation, is feeble. There only seems to be four frames when he walks (it's more of a glide than a walk). This spoils the overall look of the game, which is pretty bland anyway, consisting of a few diamonds with some bearing different markings to the others and a red circle here and there. Come on, isn't this an Amiga game? As for the explosions! They're nothing short of a joke. Even the Spectrum doesn't do explosions like that. The tiles vanish to be replaced by lots of flashing red pixels. Har de har har.

The control is horrible. For one thing, Messrs Crowther and Bishop have rotated the directional control by 90° in comparison to every other isometric perspective game, which means lots of mistakes. It's very easy to walk off the edge of a platform because you automatically direct your character according to instinct.

Bombuzal is a nice idea, but one which has been spoilt by one or two stupid mistakes.

Tony Dillon

64 UPDATE

The only differences between the 64 and the Amiga version are the graphics. Though clean and well defined on the Amiga, they suffer the same old problem of the 64's resolution. Large, blocky graphics and poor animation make it a less-than-average game visually. The overall presentation is pretty bland, with a boring front end and some fairly basic sound effects.

OLYMPIC CHALLENGE

Poor old Daley, broken, but unbowed he missed out on another Olympic medal by a measly 22 points. Ain't life a bitch?

Ocean must be more gutted about Daley's demise than most had he succeeded DTOC would probably have fared much better chartwise than it has. The 16 bit version appears, rather in the mould of Epyx games, after the main event, so it really needs a little more than topicality to give it appeal.

To their credit, Ocean have tried to make use of the Amiga with a different approach to the game in using digitised pictures of the great man to accompany the action. However these only serve to highlight what was the game's main weakness on 8 bit: it's still a very stilted joystick wagger. In each of the ten events virtually all you're asked to do is thrash the stick violently from side to side, a technique which really has as much place in sports sims these days as synchronised swimming.

The 16 bit version also falls down on the 64 with the graphics believe it or not. Yes, I know they're digitised which is fine, but for most of the events Daley's digitised pictures merely accompany the action — the real sporting prowess takes place in the world of sprites and pixels, and really these leave a bit to be desired. They're small and not really that detailed.

Sound too is poor, and although there's a jolly lull, the effects are weak and limited to the odd grunt and what sounds like an express train rattling over the points in the distance. It's supposed to be the crowd's reaction.

A shame really, because had Ocean found a way of utilising the digitised pictures more usefully and avoided the joystick pumping then I'm sure DTOC would have been a hit.

Pac has been enlarged, rotated through 90°, and given a new, overhead perspective view of the world. The game, however, remains exactly the same. Pac, a rotund yellow eat-anything ball (a bit like C+VG's ad man just after he came back from his holiday) has to race around a maze collecting all the pills that are lying on the floor by running over them, eating them as he passes.

The only things hindering him are the ghosts that race around the maze, some in a random pattern, some of which home in on him almost telepathically, and some which follow him in a 'line of sight' fashion, that is, should he go round a corner, they stop tracking him until they see him again.

The original Pacman used to get quite hectic; if you had two ghosts coming from opposite directions, and nowhere to

PACMAN

The 64 version of Pacmania isn't bad either, though funny it's a lot faster than its 16 bit counterpart. Unfortunately it doesn't have the full screen playing area. But there's only so much you can do with a 64.

The gameplay is fast and furious, but falls down by being far too easy. It took me two goes to get to the final level, so maybe forking out a tenner for 15 minutes entertainment is a little bit much.

turn, there wasn't very much you could do, except wait for the impending doom. Happily, in Pacmania, there is. You can jump up into the air, clean over the approaching ghosts and away into the blue yonder. As the ghosts don't change direction in the middle of a path, you should gain enough time to do a runner (or should that be a roller?).

As in the original, Pac has his power pills. In each of the four corners of the maze are oversized pills, which tempo-arily turn the tables on the ghosts, making Pac invincible and allowing him to kill them off by munching them. When dead, the ghosts' eyes are all that remain, whereupon they fly off to a special location in the centre of the maze to reform into ghosts, and return to menacing.

At random intervals, a special pill appears in the centre of the maze. This gives Pac things like extra lives, super speed, invulnerability or just plain points.

There are four worlds to travel through, the first three are selectable as starting levels from the front end. The amount of levels on each starts at one for world 1, and increases in direct proportion to the world number. On the higher levels, things like wrap-around mazes appear just to fool you into thinking that the maze is larger than it is. More and more ghosts appear and the mazes become more intricate. Right near the end, the big ghosts appear twice the size of an ordinary ghost. These things are hard to avoid. The one type of nasty that gets me every time is the jumping ghost. It starts on world 3 and can't be jumped over, as it has the habit of jumping when you do, so you land to jump into it, rather than over it.

To be honest there's very little distinction between the arcade version and the Amiga version — unsurprisingly since the graphics were downloaded from the coin-op. For a start, the borders have been removed to give the game a full screen. The characters are large and well detailed with all the character of the original

The sound is really nice too with a lunette here and there, and a continuous 'wakka wakka' sound when Pac moves.

Pacmania is a good game. There's no denying that it's playable, fun, a bit on the easy side maybe, but fun nonetheless. The problem is, as an idea it's a bit outdated. Nostalgics might see things differently.

You fightin' or dancin'?

BY FAIR MEANS OR FOUL

Now that the Olympics is all over and the athletes have gone home — some sooner than others — it's time to get down to the real nitty gritty of what sport is all about. By Fair Means or Foul is a boxing simulation where anything goes. It's what most sportsmen and women, if they would only admit it, are all about — winning at any cost.

The dirty business in By Fair Means or Foul is all up front where the crowd (but not the ref) can see it. None of this surreptitious steroid stuffing months before the event, here we're more into the crafty knee in the groin, the innocent below the belt punch and the outrageously overt headbutt. No so much the Ben Johnson Academy of Artificial Additives as the Paul Davis School of Unarmed Combat.

You can do some serious violence on a friend if you happen to have two joysticks, otherwise you'll have to content yourself with beating the living daylight out of a computer opponent. The truly wicked might try opting for the two player game than beating hell out of an undefended opponent while he stands there rooted to the canvas.

You can start off with Mild Martin who's not really all that mild, unless you call a swift kick in the nuts a bit of friendly fun. If you're any good you can take on Steady Eddie, Dirty Larry, Fast Freddy, Ronny Razor and Deadly Dan. The introduction screen gives you their vital statistics, plus a Lego-land style mugshot.

Before you actually get yourself into trouble, take a few shots in the practice ring where you can take it out on a punch bag on one side of the ring and a ball on the other. This'll help you get acquainted with the 16 moves that are available.

Once you're in the ring you won't have time to refer to the instructions. The bell goes for round one and your mean looking opponent is out of his corner and heading straight for you faster than a miffed Korean ring official.

The crowd are in an ugly mood and speech balloons saying 'get on with it and 'ZZZZZZ' rise from the seething mass. The ideal technique is to get in there, strike home with a few jabs and move off before you get hurt. That way you can keep up your energy bar and whittle away at your opponents bit by bit. You must keep up the attacks or his energy meter will gradually creep back up to full. At the end of the sixty seconds the player with the higher energy reling wins the round.

If you want to score a direct KO you'll have to play dirty (unless you are a very good clean fighter). The mark of a truly great dirty fighter is knowing when to throw the foul punch. A traffic light type indicator at the top of the screen helps. The little men shows green when the ref's not looking and red when a fouled punch would have you sent back to your corner (you can get off lightly in this game). So as soon as the green light shows, that's the time to go in with the vicious kicks, below the belt punches your knees, head, anything you can really hurt him with.

As you have probably noticed from the screenshot, Fair Means or Foul can hardly be said to be pushing back the frontiers of 64 graphics. Why one boxer is purple (apart from possibly the side effects of all those synthetic substances) is a complete mystery.

The action is quite humorous — at first — but the novelty soon wears off. If FMOF is a winner, then it's by a poke in the eye rather than a clean knock-out.

Screen Scene

Yes, now you too can have the chance to explore all the sights and sounds of the mid 19th century globe, for you are none other than the hero of Jules Verne's lighthearted book — Phileas Fogg, scientist, explorer, flounderer, drunkard and card

Whirl collapsed in a semi-paralytic stupor one night, you made a small (£20,000) wager with a friend that you could circumnavigate the world in under 80 days. Just you and your little French friend Paspalou. You leave England for Paris, and your adventures begin.

Around The World in 80 Days sadly, isn't very exciting. The thought of spending 2½ months doing what you can now do in under 24 hours doesn't sit comfortably in my mind. Not to say that the game is based on poor subject matter. It's simply that the game is based maraly on four subgames, each supposedly showing part of his journey.

Not that Phileas even makes an appearance in the game. It's all seen through the eyes of Paspalou.

The main part of the game is basically a view of a map of the globe, and a small white dot showing the location of our heroes. Dotted around are various pieces of information showing the date, form of transport, how much money is left, and the four action icons. These are 'Bribe', give the pilot/driver/tower money to make him go faster, 'Cards', which you play to win money, 'Play', which takes you directly to the next subgame, and 'Pause'.

The first of the subgames is a gentle jaunt through an Indian jungle and into an underground temple. Later subgames include acrobatic hurling in Japan and bank robber avoiding in London.

The subgames are viewed side-on, much in the mould of Rolling Thunder. The game 'scrolls' (I use the term in the loosest sense of the word, it actually flip-scrolls and very badly too) from left to right, occasionally up and down, and pits you against various nasties. In the first one, you are pitted against tribal natives which you attack with exploding spears. Later on you kill birds, rats, and the guy who makes all the intaling background flute noises. Yes, that is something that I can say is OK, the sound effects. Though not the best I've heard, they are quite atmospheric, though they can't save this game.

Gameplay is almost non-existent, the controls are slow and unresponsive, and as for the time it takes to fire, you're better off trying to avoid things.

A weak attempt after Into The Eagle's Nest

The 64 version of AROUND (sounds like a reggae band) features all the same screens and subgames of the Amiga version, and thankfully has dropped the flip scroll format and turned into a smooth scroller. The graphics, however, are equally bad and the sound is terrible. It's also marred by extremely long multi-loading times. Avoid.

CYBERNOID

Raffelle Cecco's Cybernoid was a big enough hit with the CU crew last May when it was released on the 64 and earned Howson a Screen Star. Not surprising then that they should follow it up a mere six months later with the sequel, or rather The Revenge to give it its proper subtitle.

At first glance Cybernoid II doesn't look at all that different from its predecessor. The bad news is that several glances later I was still thinking the same thing. The plot yields no surprises: the pirates have returned in a new, even more fearsome battleship to plunder the Federation storage depots. Because you made such a good job of getting rid of them last time you have once again been chosen to sea them off and recover the cargo. In other words, more of the same.

You'll have gathered by now (if you didn't know already) that a lot of shooting, bombing and dodging goes on in this game. The thing is set in a sort of post-Chernobyl Kew Gardens landscape filled with ugly looking plant life. The plants spill deadly blobs at your cyber craft but they don't go that fast and would be easily dodged were it not for the hundred and one other things happening at the same time. A whole host of flying saucers, rockets, deadly snowflake things and the like, plus, of course, the alien ships chase after you and destroy your craft at a touch (you start with four).

Apart from the different screen layout (the most noticeable enhancement to this new version is the extended array of weaponry you are provided with. There are now seven keys to scramble for desperately if you want to avert death. The old stuff is still there — plain bombs, bouncing bombs and enemy-seeking missiles, as well as the frisky shield (not that frisky actually, as it always gives out when you least expect and most need it). Additional armament comes in the form of time bombs, a smart bomb and the absolutely brilliant tracer missiles which scoot round the edge of the screen destroying everything in their path.

All the things that made Cybernoid a Screen Star are still there: superb music and sound effects, really brilliant flowery graphics and gameplay that requires a bit of thought and a lot of concentration, not just a sharp trigger finger. I don't think there's much here for existing Cybernoid players, not enough has changed, but definitely worth a look as far as everyone else is concerned.

IMPOSSIBLE MISSION

Price: £19.99

Evil Elvin Atom-bender is back. Still miffed after losing out on a computer high score, and then having his plot to destroy the world foiled by special agent 4125, he's holed up in an even stronger fortress, with more deadly robots, guards, trap doors and an even more fen-dishly designed maze.

The recently released sequel to Imp Miss, was not as good as its predecessor, and this also goes for the Amiga version. Which is a shame, because despite the Amiga's extra capabilities, the animation, speech and gameplay are all much weaker.

You're required to collect and assemble the three digit pass codes to enable agent 4125 to gain access to Elvin's tower. Inside he has to collect several musical sequences. Once he's gathered them all he has to form the correct tune, which then allows him to pass onto Elvin's central tower to find the main control computer and use it to disarm the missile launch codes. No mean feat.

The room design remains almost unchanged, though a few modifications have been added: walls block your path and in addition to the up/down elevators there are other platforms which move horizontally. Instead of using computer passes to reset the lifts, or disable the robots, now the terminals can be used to switch on electric lights, arm a time bomb (which is then placed by the agent to blow up a safe) or arm mines which explode on contact with anything, including your agent.

Even the robots have been re-styled — they're far more deadly than in the previous game. Minebots run round on the lifts, totally cocking up any lift strategy you might have worked out; Bashbots attempt to push you off the nearest platform or out of a room; and Squibots can be used as spring boards if you land on them properly.

The final room is a complete nightmare, with every type of robot and trap. But there are security laminates so you can use any passes that have been collected.

If you have ever played Impossible Mission on the 64 it could be that you'll be very disappointed with this, but it's still a good challenge if you discount the reputation it has to live up to.

ROCKET RANGER

To be blunt, the authors of this game are asking a bit much. They've charged you with the task of storming a hostile Pacific island single handed, destroying a neutron beam located in the middle, collecting the constituent parts of a bridge to get there, rescuing hostages imprisoned in four locations and, if you have time, doing away with as many of the defending forces as you can — and all before lunch too.

Battle Island is so large, it takes up more than 300 screens. Since your job is to cover almost every inch of it, Novagen have thoughtfully provided you with a map. Now those of you who detest maps aren't going to like this, because using it is pretty essential. The island is laid out like a maze, complete with walls, fences, gun emplacements, gates which automatically open and shut and a number of installations that you must visit.

The map shows you where the eight constituent parts of the bridge are, which you must acquire to cross the moat and gain access to the neutron beam placement at the centre of the island. The problem is that from your start position, there is only one way to gal round the island and you must collect bridge parts in the order they're numbered on the map. Not surprisingly, collecting all eight involves a scenic trip around the whole island. The four installations where hostages are held captive are also clearly marked. These must be raided too.

You get a 'helicopter' view of the island and as you move, the scenery scrolls smoothly in all four directions — very impressive. You're equipped with only a gun that fires what looks like pingpong balls and a limited number of smart grenades. But you can get more blasting power by picking up various items along the way.

BATTLE ISLAND

A Commando clone or something more sinister? Turn to The Last Word

For example, picking up the Tommy gun icon gives you more firepower, whilst the shoes make you move quicker. There are also a few 'anarchy' emplacements which give you more lives. By the way, these aren't marked on the map so you'd better keep your eyes peeled.

You can also gain protection against the enemy's bullets by acquiring a shield. The process works like this: do away with enough nasties and a star appears. Gathering the first three steadily increases the firepower whilst the fourth gives you a temporary invincibility shield. The shield works just fine until you lose a life, and then you're back to basic weaponry.

Graphically, Battle Island is little different to Commando and its clones. But it does give you some variation in scenery, vast expanses of checkerboard squares, electrified fences, a realistic coastline etc. And the installations are clear and easy to spot. Each one is entered by a gate that opens and shuts automatically as soon as you stand in front of it. Sound is OK. You hear various nasties before they appear, like the trundling tanks or the whistling grenades.

Since there's so much looking at the map to be done, a Pause key is thoughtfully provided. You'll use this often to get your bearings. For a quicker idea of where you are, you can glance at the middle one of three panels at the bottom of the screen. This shows your location on the map and the location of the nearest bridge part. The left panel shows your score and the number of smart grenades left, whilst the right panel displays your lives situation.

Battle Island is by no means original but it does provide many hours of strategic blasting, though the cheapo graphics and feel may detract too much for the perfectionists among you.

Captain Blood is to the 64 games market what a breath of fresh air is to the morning after a beanfeast. The easiest way I can describe it is as an adult space adventure. Now, by the word 'adult' I don't mean that it contains matter that is morally unsuitable. I mean that it's a game that requires a lot of thought, patience and a great deal of time. (Even so, the game is French, so expect a naked lady at some stage.)

From what I gathered of my brief glimpse through the novella accompanying the game, the Captain Blood of the title is some sort of alien captain who has the gift of immortality, provided he has enough life juice — unfortunately, he's run out. You take control of him 45 hours (real

BLOOD

That's it

From around the flight deck, you can call up various screens. For example, if you have beamed up a creature then you can deposit it on another planet or simply disintegrate it, all at the point of a digit. You can call up an outside view of the planet you're orbiting and then blow it up or send down an Oorox (An Oorox? — Ed) Yes, an Oorox. Finally, you can pull up a starmap and select another planet to fly to, but baby this knocks the socks off the galactic maps in Elite.

So, you've got to your planet and you're dying (no pun intended) to gal down their and have a closer look. What now? Well, this is where the Oorox comes in. Described by the authors as (to be read in a disgustingly 'Aloalo' mickey-laka of a French accent) 'missile-fish' What it does is descend to the planet in question and fly around in search of life, all under your control. Done rather like a flight simulator, and with some of the fastest vector graphics I've seen on the 64, all the mountains, valleys, canyons etc are portrayed in glorious outline-o-vision, and dead effective it is too.

The life I spoke of earlier is found (if there is any) at the end of a long canyon which every planet has. This has to be found and negotiated whilst avoiding walls and missiles. Some of the planets have defence systems and the only thing you can do when you see a missile coming at you on your scanner is to cut all speed and drop down low until the missile passes.

When you reach the end of the canyon, the Oorox automatically slows to a halt, and then the computer fills in the vectors, so you end up with a very lunar looking picture. If you're lucky, a being will now pop up and start a conversation. This is where it gets tricky.

As in real life, there's a knack to having a good conversation. The only problem in speaking to an alien is that it probably doesn't understand English, so it's out with the handy translator. As the alien speaks, a row of icons appear at the bottom of the picture, rather like subtitles, and it's by running your finger along these that you decode exactly what the alien is saying. Then, when you've discovered what it wants, answer back by selecting icons from a scrollable display at the bottom of the screen.

One of the things I haven't mentioned yet — since most people will have already spotted it on the screenshots — is just how attractive the game is. From the beautifully defined interior of the ship, to the incredibly effective planets right down to the cute and loveable aliens, there is very little that hasn't been converted directly from the 16 bit versions.

Sound is great too, with atmospheric thrusting noises during hyperspace and the Oorox flight, not to mention the various grunts and moans emitted by the alien forms.

Definitely one of the closest conversions ever, this is deserving of any 64 owner's attention.

This one's definitely more chewy than Narrow-in-Furness bus depot.

THE MUNCHER

The Muncher is a bit similar to the coin-op Rampage isn't it?

"Which coin-op?", said the man from Gremlin.

"You know, the one with the goniff that goes around pulling down buildings and eating people."

"Oh, that one"

"Yes that one"

In other words they might look similar, but then one space trading game looks much the same as another and if you take two games which both feature a monster, tall buildings and short people...

So, The Muncher has nothing to do with Rampage.

Now a word from our sponsor. Chewits are chewier than a twenty storey building. Who's going to swallow that one? What am I talking about? Well, the monster in the Chewits TV ad and 'The Muncher' are in fact one and the same. Details are in short supply, but there's some kind of deal whereby Chewit eaters can get enormous reductions on the game. As yet there are no plans to supply Muncher players with twenty storey buildings at special rates.

Now back to the game. The muncher stands there looking pretty gormless while small men with guns, tanks, armoured vehicles and helicopters take pot shots at him, seriously depleting his supply of energy. The avar versatile joystick gives the Muncher a wide range of counter attack options. He can reduce tall buildings to a pile of rubble with a few well aimed tail swipes and having thus reduced the buildings to scaleable proportions he can then leap them in a single bound, as they say, or start climbing

There are three stages in the game: the Beach, Nintendo Park and the Army Base, which are completed by getting from one end of the scrolling landscape to the other without dying in between. Things get more difficult the further you progress, and it you manage to reach the end you get to fight it out with another ugly looking prehistoric beast in true King Kong v Godzilla style.

Despite all that the game is not what you'd call enormously difficult. In other words it's quite easy. It's intended, I would say, for novice-demolishing-people-eating prehistoric monsters and not old hands at the game.

BATTLECHESS

Chess has always been considered an ideal game for a computer. It has the logic to make all the right moves, is completely unbiased, doesn't mind waiting while you think for hours on end and is always willing to tell you what your best move is.

There have been a lot of them, but for some strange reason, none of them have been remarkably successful, except maybe PSI Chess on the Spectrum, but that was mainly due to its large, hi-res representation of a chess board in 3D. Battlechess takes that 3D element, and takes it one stage further.

Battlechess is so called because the game you play isn't so much the relaxing pastime originally thought up by those incredibly clever Chinese people, but a war between the two sanctions of Blue and Brown sets of pieces in the familiar Isle of Lewis set.

The obvious attraction to this game is the fabulous graphics. Large, sharp and very colourful, every piece is both distinct and recognisable. The one thing that a still shot can't portray is the action. It changes the standard chess terminology of 'Pawn takes Knight' to 'Pawn takes knight by kicking him hard in the groin'. You see, every time you make a move, the piece currently under control comes to life and walks to the chosen destination square. The knights, with their 'jump to square' moves, simply barges everyone out of the way in an effort to get to where they want to go. The queen glides, bottom wagging sumptuously, and the rooks (my favourite) transform from small castles into large rock giants reminiscent of Ban Grimm, stomp to their square, and transform back, all in three loads. Yes, unfortunately, rather than store the graphic sequences in memory, they are all held on disk, each loaded in when necessary. This does slow the game down quite a lot, but as this is a chess program, it doesn't really detract all that much.

The combat sequences are the best thing about this game. There are at least three sequences for every different kind of capture in the game (Pawn-Pawn, Pawn-Queen, Queen-Pawn etc) and each one is guaranteed to bring at least a smile to your face, if not a little chuckle or two. The Pawn kicks the Knight in the family jewels to stop him galloping. The Knight freezes, drops his shield, turns to face out of the screen with his hands on his afflicted area, moans, and collapses stiffly (very much like our own Editor when he had an accident while putting on his expensive leather jacket. I won't go into details, but it involved the jack-of nunchukas. All accompanied by some great sound effects.

Soonar or later, of course, you're going to get tired with all these nice graphics. What are you left with then? Fortunately, an excellent chess game, full of options (which are accessed by a drop-down menu in the shape of gilt scrolls, complete with accompanying cherubims, wings flapping like crazy!) Tan skill levels — enough to challenge any Grandmaster, complete configure board options, load/save game, 1 player, 2 player, 0 player or even Modern play as well as a full hint facility and the option to take back any number of moves, right back to the start of the game.

Maybe as a chess program, it's not the best ever on the Amiga, but it's definitely the most interesting and certainly the most fun.

Screen Scene

Licensed to fail?

Live and Let Die is yet another James Bond release that should qualify for double-oh zero.

The exact background of this game is confused but, as TLW made clear last month, it did originally belong to Elite (their logo remains splashed all over its loading screen) and it bears more than a passing resemblance to Buggy Boy.

Once again you are cast in the role of JB in a game which, unsurprisingly, bears little resemblance to the film. This is a shame since there is enough variety in the average Bond film for a dozen games. Anyway, this one's water flavoured.

A paltry serving of four missions is offered up, three training and one for real. The easiest (pseudo) mission is target practice on the British waterways, so you head off in your boat loaded with unlimited fuel and missiles and plug as many targets as possible within a set distance. No real threats here apart from rocks. When you complete this you can go training on a river in the Sahara desert(?) This time with added aqua mines, torpedo launching helicopters and other boats. Polar training is the third training mission but there's little difference to the Sahara one.

Your boat is armed with a machine gun and missiles, as well as a limited amount of fuel which is constantly drained. When you die, those few seconds of immobility waste a fair amount of fuel. Not surprisingly, extra fuel can be collected on the way red pods give a small amount of fuel, silver nearly half a tank, green tops up your missiles as well as the fuel tank, and the yellow pods fall off the back of the boat and should ideally be avoided.

Had this game been set on land it would be an exact cross between Road Blasters and Buggy Boy. Take for instance the slopes which you can expertly guide your boat up to avoid difficult obstacles, the logs which bounce your boat into the air, or the gun turrets placed on the river bends. Sound familiar?

Once I had mastered the rudimentary control and tactics I decided to quit beating around the bush and go straight for the jugular in the final mission in New Orleans. The scenery this time was green in preference to sandy yellow but otherwise basically the same. After a while each game was taking me ten minutes and there was still no sign of the elusive Mr Big and his cocaine racket, so I did the decent thing and pulled the plug on the game.

The onshore scenery generally is a picturesque mess with the puce green palm trees lining the canals of England and an apparently buildingless New Orleans. The sprite enlarging is actually better than I expected with a few more updates than some games I could mention. In passing I also have to point out the omission of the Bond theme or the Wings' Live and Let Die tune as well.

Poor old Cubby Broccoli must be lying in his grave by now (but he isn't dead! — Ed), so please lads do the guy justice and release a decent Bond game.

FERNANDEZ MUST DIE

Fascist dictators, who needs them? Probably the worst of the lot is Fernandez, a ruthless, mindless killer who has stolen and secured a large strip of land and called it his. He didn't ask for it or anything, he just walked right in, looked around, said 'this is nice, property is theft, this is mine', and that was that. He doesn't fool around though. The only reason that the land hasn't been snatched back is because it is now protected by large forces of armoured soldiers, tanks, gun emplacements, gunboats, traffic wardens and Salvation Army recruits — a formidable opponent indeed.

Set along this strip of land are eight enemy bases, each of which contains an official personage, there to oversee his own little bit of entrusted land. The scene is set, cue Harman — crack commando and all-round hard person, who acts as the seven samurai, all rolled up into one.

Though the games have the same title and plot, Fernandez Must Die on the Amiga is almost a totally different game to the 64 version. Granted it's a vertically scrolling Commando variant and has the option of riding in a jeep, and has large boats and tanks, but it is different, honestly. For a start, the game is arranged as one long strip, rather than eight short interconnected ones. The total playing area is 256 screens long (1) and should take at least 40 minutes to complete.

You are armed with a variety of weapons ranging from a standard rifle, for taking out the enemy soldiers that randomly wander about the place, to a missile launcher, for the biggies, such as tanks and boats. You also carry a limited supply of dynamite, for blasting open the doors of the buildings that are scattered about the luxuriously green landscape, such as armouries, houses with sales in them (which can also be blown open with dynamite — rewarding you with an extra life). To activate the dynamite, just touch a door, and then run away from it.

The other weapon in your arsenal, and probably the most important one, is your jeep. Playing the role of the tank in Ikan Warriors, it provides invincibility for a limited period, as well as the capability of being able to mow down the enemy soldiers. Plus, of course, it's a lot quicker to get around. Unfortunately, it's only temporary, take too many hits and your bonnet goes up in flames. It is best advised to get to the nearest garage (of which there are a few dotted about) and drive through the handy carwash to extinguish the flames, as well as giving you a full weapons refill.

The graphics are pretty nice, though maybe a little on the small side. Detailed and colourful, there's no trouble distinguishing between objects. The best bit graphically that I could find is when your man gets shot, he spins and falls to the floor, blood pumping from his wounds.

Sound isn't too bad either. Lots of the usual machine gun type noises, coupled with an 'argh' or two emitted by the guards as you introduce the front of your jeep to their head.

Playability is where this game fails slightly. It's very hard to get the jeep to about face, and on top of that, you can walk through the edges of the buildings, drive your jeep under closed barriers and walk through the enemy. But that's just being picky.

Fernandez Must Die is a good little game, but it doesn't really add anything to the mounting pile of Amiga innovations. The Amiga is a young machine, and its limits haven't even begun to be reached. Shouldn't programmers be going for something new?

AMIGA

Screen Scene

You made it to the end of a level, but didn't collect enough jewels to merit a bonus life

Following hot in the vapour trails of Zynaps, comes Hewson's latest Amiga product, the conversion of the classic Spectrum shoot 'em up, Cybernoid.

Originally designed by Raffaella Cacco, Cybernoid follows the tale of a lone mercenary pilot sent by the Federation to retrieve valuable minerals, jewels and weaponry stolen by marauding space pirates.

Strapped into the high-tech fighter Cybernoid, the pilot begins his mission in the pirates' subterranean fortress, which is set over 150 flick-screen locations. Each screen presents its own brand of danger, including massive gun emplacements, alien growths gobbing out missiles, and, of course, pirate ships with guns a-blazin'.

The Cybernoid is armed with a single blaster, and one up the exhaust port is enough to scupper any flimsy old pirate ships in the vicinity. In fact, the renegade spacers would have been better off sitting in the cargo containers, since these survive the blast and fall to the ground intact. The goodies contained therein are simply collected on contact with the Cybernoid, and stored in the hold, ready to be sent back to the Federation.

Stolen weaponry and ammunition packs are scattered through the caverns and are similarly collected to boost the Cybernoid's armoury.

CYBERNOID

In addition to blasters, the Cybernoid also boasts bombs, impact mines, defence shields, bouncing bombs and seeker missiles, which are selected via the function keys and initiated by holding down the fire button. This array of doom can be supplemented by collecting a rear-facing blaster and up to three rotating multiples, which are extremely attractive to look at, and particularly effective against anything stupid enough to get in their way.

At the end of each level, special depots appear whereupon the Cybernoid lands in safety and the valuables collected so far are beamed back to the Federation. If enough valuables have been gathered, an extra Cybernoid ship is awarded; if not, the pilot has to battle on with his remaining stock of hardware.

This Amiga incarnation offers more for the incompetent amongst us, in that it is a LOT easier to play—but don't worry. To make up for this apparent deficit, Hewson assure me that the fourth level is a pig! And it is around 80 screens long, providing more than enough game to keep most Cyberfans blasting well into the early hours.

On the aesthetic side, Cybernoid isn't quite as impressive as it should have been. The background graphics are a bit repetitive, and some of the sprites are unimaginative to say the least.

Still, there are some decent sampled sound effects to add to the atmosphere and, more importantly, the gameplay has been tweaked just the right amount. The earlier eight-bit faults have been ironed out and Cybernoid now provides even more of a challenge than did its inspiration. It's certainly had more than its fair share of attention in the office this month. Now then, where's Cybernoid II?

DRILLER

Since it was first conceived, Driller was wowed as the step forward in the direction of the game of the future. Claims of incredible realism and fast, smooth filled vector graphics made the world and his mother sit up and listen. Then the game was released. To be fair, the Spectrum version was pretty hot, but the C64 version left a lot to be desired. Finally, the Amiga version has appeared, and judging by the recent 3D competition to hit the 16 bit market (Carver Command, Starblaster

2), it had to be something pretty devastating.

For those of you who don't already know, the basic idea behind Driller is that the moon of Mitral (a moon of Evath, a recently human-colonised planet) is in danger of exploding, blowing Evath completely out of orbit and killing lots of Evathians. The reason for the moon's sudden liking to go bang is due to small pockets of gas trapped beneath the surface, which are now turning into big pockets of gas. You have to get up to Mitral and position a rig on each of the moon's 18 faces, the ultimate aim being to release at least 50% of the gas pressure on each one.

On each plane there are clues as to where you have to position a drilling rig. On the first screen, there is a big cross on the ground, so no prizes for guessing where that 64 version are that this version is faster and the vectors are finer. When I say faster, it's still only about the same speed as Mercenary on the 64, with the same vector graphics system. By that I mean that it uses straight, vanishing point vectors rather than curved vectors, which gives it a flat look and very little feeling of distance.

Sound is nothing above average. The same old usual blasting noises coupled with a hum here and there.

It's a shame, really. Driller could have been such a good game, had the programmers tried to write it for the Amiga, and not done a simple conversion of all the other formats. After all, who wants a Spectrum game on their Amiga?

ROY OF THE ROVERS

Anyone remember Roy of the Rovers? He's one of those perennially young goodie, goodie footballers whose improbable net busters always save the day despite him being somewhere in his late fifties. Personally, I admire the likes of Paul Davis and Vinny Jones, upholders of the true footballing spirit.

Gremlin's game is really two games in one. The first and more substantial bit is an animated adventure. The second game, a five-a-side football sim, is very much less substantial and looks as though it's been bolted on simply to justify the footballing expectations of any punter who digs deep for it. Without it Roy of the Rovers could have been anybody. Maybe a car salesman?

For what it's worth, I'll let you in on the scenario. Apparently, Roy's teammates have been kidnapped before the Big Match (why doesn't that happen to West Ham? Ed). Roy's task is to find all ten of them before it's too late and the promoters pull out. Presumably this means Melchester FC will become a Shopper's Paradise hypermarket (just like Stamford Bridge).

You control Roy with your joystick, wandering through the streets of Melchester, exploring the streets themselves and any buildings you can get into. You can snoop and talk to various people, in the hope that they'll give you a clue. As you'd expect, various useful (and useless) objects are to be found and picked up. These, if you get the right ones, should enable you to rescue your teammates from captivity.

There are a set of four pull-down menu options across the top of the screen, activated by the Function keys. The first menu gives you a set of physical options: walk, run, chat smile and fight. There's also a set of options for picking up, putting down and using any objects you've collected. You can go home (where you'll find more objects), visit your mum or just rest to gain more energy.

Although the gameplay is well implemented, the interminable wandering round the streets gets pretty boring and you need to do a lot of it to find you where various places are. There are some nasty tricks lying in wait though.

Like these two. Go into the police station (on Lettby Avenue) and they'll merely detain you for questioning and lose you lots of time. Here's another. The bloke in the Kings Arms tells you to gall some dosh together and meet another bloke in 25 minutes at the Farmers Arms. So you go home, get your wallet, and somebody mugs you on the way back. Apart from that lot, you'll come across people who pull guns on you or won't let you past etc. All in all, Melchester comes across more like the Bronx than anywhere else.

I'm sure there's a story to be unravelled behind all these going ons but I'm not sure if it can be bothered to find out. By the way, if you run out of time, you can sit back and watch a team of bulldozers make a night old mess of the lush Melchester FC turf.

Anyway, you're then transported into the 5-a-side football section which you only get to play in practice mode until you complete the first section.

Now the less I say about the football the better — owing to the fact that it's completely naïf. Most glaring booboo is the omission of goalposts. It looked to me as though the goalie had put down a pair of pumps. One consolation is that there's a one or two player option — that's if you can find somebody else stupid enough to play.

Don't be fooled by the name. If you're expecting an action packed football sim, stay away.

Screen Scene

only activate one red and one green key at once, so you have to plan very carefully which one you select.

You are under constant bombardment by the aliens that populate the plains. Large balls roll in your direction, continually tracking you, gun emplacements pop up Xenonlike and fire at you; homing missiles come after you all the time. There's just no getting away.

The graphics are really nice. Sharp and colourful. No-one could call the game unattractive. The scrolling isn't exactly smooth, but it does have a very nice parallax affect. Well, not exactly true parallax. The backdrop is two layer, with the rear layer only seen through holes in the front layer. The strange, but very pretty thing is, the rear layer scrolls slightly out of synchronisation with the front, so you get a terrific, if slightly weird, eyeing affect.

Sound is quite nice, with a repeating tune all the way through. After a few hours, I can see how it might get boring, but then you can always turn it off.

There are two ways you can play Fusion. You can either play it as a straight, well balanced cross between frantic blasting and taxing problem solving, or you can take it as a straight shoot-em-up. Either way, it's a damn good game.

Tony Dillon

The first thing I saw about this game that I liked was the first page of Fusion's manual, which gives you a short sarcastic plot under the title of Not The Story ('The galaxy is under threat and only you in your very small Treng fighter can save us...') and then goes on to tell you that Fusion is a game. Not a simulation of a futuristic sport, but merely a computer game with you playing it. Credit where credit's due, well done to the writer. Well, it made me laugh, anyway.

The idea behind Fusion is to traverse the many alien levels and collect all the parts of The Bomb, and then return to the start level and drop the bomb on the bomb square (recognisable because it looks like a bomb). To get to the other levels, you are going to have to do some puzzle solving.

You start on a metallic looking plateau looking out around the 360° scrolling landscape of large pylons, huge holes and alien vegetation. Pathways lead off the plateau into a mazelike series of connecting paths down to ground level where, somewhere, your ship is hiding. I say hiding because if you are more than a third of a screen away, it turns on its cloaking device, rendering it invisible to all and sundry. Which, as you can imagine, makes it a bit difficult when you cannot remember where you put it. The whole point of the ship is that you can fly around at great speeds over areas that you couldn't go 'on foot', to survey the area and to get between levels. All the problem solving has to be done on foot, just like the old 64 favourite, Parallax. In fact, this game is very similar to Parallax in many ways, except of course for the ultimate aim and the bit about the scientists.

The problem solving comes in the guise of locked off areas and keys. The keys are represented by large rectangular blocks on the ground, with a geometrical shape in the centre of them, either red or green. The locks are smaller versions of the keys, set against a wall or exit to another level. To activate the key, you have to run over it by foot, and as it's usually set in the centre of a maze with no clear room for the mothership to land, you have to lend outside the maze and find your own way in. FINAL ASSAULT

Having experienced the whip of wind through hair and the crash of rock against head first hand, I was somewhat dubious as to the nature of a rock climbing simulator. To start with there is a distinct lack of physical effort involved, and a five thousand foot rock face doesn't fit on my 21" TV.

Before you can start the real heavy biz of scaling the summit of mount whatever-it-is, you first have to learn the rudiments of mountaineering. You are given control of a little person kitted out with every conceivable piece of equipment, and not subject to any weight restrictions. The first thing my little man told me — I decided to call him Greville in the end (? — Ed) — was that he was cold, so I rummaged through his back pack and made him wear the kind of items his mum would pack like anoraks and woolly knickers.

called for — until a wacking gale chasm opened up taking Greville completely by surprise as it swallowed him. A scrolly message then appeared telling me that we should have checked the ground ahead of us, but seeing how it was raining nothing serious had happened to Greville. Phew, what a relief.

After I'd mastered walking, I decided we needed a real challenge. So being a fearless adventurer-type I set Greville on the longest route to the top to be seriously simulated. A few more flip screens of walking, then Greville was placed precariously on a wall of ice. With a quick reference back to the instructions I pushed up on the joystick and Greville obliged by hammering his ice picks into the surface. Pulling down then caused him to bang his knee into the ice, and a quick tap on the fire button saw him haul himself up a few feet. After several million repetitions of this exercise the ice peeled out into rock and rather than the previous side-on view, the image changed to that from the rear.

Climbing the rock is achieved by moving the character's arms and legs into various embarrassing positions in order to obtain the best possible grip on the surface. With skilful use of the rope, soft shoes and chalk, Greville succeeded in getting absolutely nowhere. Now was the time to look for the cheat. I soon discovered, that if you move fast enough up the slope the computer doesn't have enough time to check the positions of all Greville's limbs and therefore doesn't have time to make him fall back down again. Subsequently I took another two minutes to complete the game.

At the summit, the screen changed to that of Greville holding an American flag with a broad grin on his face, this was in turn replaced by a newspaper headline and it was back to the start screen.

At this point I was not in any way tempted to go for another crack of the glacier by taking one of the live other paths if you've seen one, you've seen 'em all.

A very poor offering on the whole, on a subject that right from the start would seem foolhardy to try to convert to a home micro. The gameplay is so thin that it requires a loupé. Graphically it's weak. Blocky sprites (especially poor Greville, bless him) do nothing for the game. There is though, a very soothing piece of title screen music — but even that tends to make you nod off. A fitting introduction, methinks...

SAVAGE

Is this really possible? The 64 soundtrack sounds incredibly similar to the Amiga demo I've seen, right down to the squillions of samples. Quite simply, it's mindblowing. Without doubt the best soundtrack I've ever heard on the humble old 64, and that's just the little music. I'll laugh wholeheartedly at the next Amiga owner who says 8-bit is dead, then stick this disk up his bol passage with a cry of "boot this, sucker!"

Getting back to the review, Savage is a huge, muscle-bound bucket of love, whose ladyfriend has been kidnapped by some evil force and imprisoned in a ghost-filled castle. Of course, Savage wants to get her back. And who wouldn't?

The obvious thing for him to do is to get out the inexhaust-ible supply of magic axes and go in on a mass killing spree. This he does, running left to right along the long corridors, Tranter-like, until he reaches the exit to the next level. In places along the corridors there are huge chasms that have to be leaped, often three or more in a row, with only a small pedestal between them. Miss your footing and it's down you go.

Get through the first section, and Savage has to fly on a jetbike through Death Valley. Viewed in 3D with the same kind on snip, scrolling landscape as games like Out Run and Roadblasters (though much smoother and faster than either of these, and indeed any previous effort) you have to pilot your way between huge green men eating monoliths while shooting whichever baddies happen to be on the sublevel you are currently on (There are 3). On the first, rotating skulls float eerily in the distance; on the second, large bounding ghosts spring about in front of your gunsight and on the third? That's a surprise.

Savage has made it to the end of Death Valley and has realised that instead of bringing him closer to his love, it's taken him further away. So he gets back as quick as possible, only to find that his journey has taken him to a different entrance, one far too small for him to fit through, so he calls on the assistance of his Eagle to aid him.

The eagle has to fly through a labyrinth of tunnels and cells in search of the young lady, attacked by and attacking ghosts and statues, avoiding all the traps that can be sprung just by flying in the wrong place. Fly too close to a spike trap and you could find yourself impaled. Try to fly through a group of nasties and instead of just losing energy, you could lose your head!

That's how it looks on paper, but what's the game really like? Excellent is probably the most appropriate word I can come up with. For a start it's immensely playable with very fast responses and a difficulty level high enough to keep you coming back for more.

Graphics are among some of the best I've ever seen on the 64. Large and well defined (apart from the main sprite on level 1. Brown! I ask you!) The animation is first rate, smooth, fast and realistic. The eagle on level 3 has to be seen to be believed.

The sound though is its highpoint. Lots of great tunes and FX, with lots and lots of samples. The title tune is the best though, probably the best ever. Beating Mega Apocalypse and even the wonderful Commando hi-score table tune hands down.

Buy Savage! If you don't, then you're a bigger nurd than the one on the advertisement.

Deep inside an old, dark castle the spirit and soul of some nameless deceased have become separated and float aimlessly through the surreal rooms and corridors of the deserted building.

The person's spirit has taken the form of a smiling ghost (perhaps he hasn't realised he's dead yet!) of the white-sheet variety, while the soul is encapsulated in a transparent bubble. For some unexplained reason, the ghost is charged with guiding the bubble around the 34 flick screen rooms of the castle, and while the ghost may be guided through the variety of obstacles in a suitably ethereal manner, the bubble is extremely fragile and bursts at the slightest contact. Since the ghost cannot actually touch anything, he moves the bubble by blowing it.

A tap on the SHIFT key on the fire button and the ghost puffs out his little cheeks and the bubbles move accordingly, drifting along slowly until blown in another direction. Blow for too long and the spirit turns red.

As the bubble reaches the exit (a gap in the brickwork) the next screen slithers into view, and the ghost continues in this way until all 34 screens have been negotiated.

As can be seen from the screenshots, the scenery is typically French — ie, odd! The rooms are full of weird objects, many animated, and are full of little 'gags' which facilitate the need to blow objects to help progress.

Bubble Ghost is a fairly original, if simple concept, but the gameplay is quite addictive.

The novel control method is tricky to get to grips with — the

BUBBLE
GHOST

It's not exactly Interspace

64 version requires the fire button to be used to blow and rotate the ghost by holding it and moving left or right on the joystick. But it soon becomes second nature, and the bubble can be guided around with amazing precision. If wasn't long before I was whizzing through the screens — in fact, after only a few days' play I had got through 27 of the 34 screens. This is fine for me, but rather more worrying for those of you contemplating sheeling your hard earned on it.

Bubble Ghost is fun — but at a cost; if it had a cheaper price tag it might be a more viable proposition.

Steve Jarratt

AMIGA £19.95

There's little graphically to separate the Amiga version from its 64 counterpart.

The control method is slightly easier for the simple reason that the mouse allows you to rotate the ghost, whilst clicking makes him blow. This is the only place too where added sound enhances the 16 bit version. Make the ghostly geezer blow too hard and he'll collapse with a wheezy cough.

It's also the easiest version, so twenty quid is definitely too steep.

PLATOON

It was slightly less than a year ago that Platoon first appeared on the 64, to (rightly) good reviews from the media. Although it split the licence into several smaller games, each one owed itself to an event in the film.

Somehow the conversion has sneaked out into the shops before it appeared in our offices, but I reckon you might like a word of warning rather than take a chance.

The game is split into six sections. Section one begins as you guide your platoon through a series of jungle pathways. It all looks the same, as jungles tend to do, and there are VC crawling everywhere, so death is a frequent guide through what is just about the most boring and badly realised part of this conversion. It really is worse than its 64 counterpart. It's also very frustrating.

The neatly clipped jungle section.

Blow the bridge and you'll appear in the relatively short village section which has the same gameplay and entails collecting a map and a torch so you can enter the tunnel sequence.

Once in the subterranean retrans of section three, Platoon begins to come alive as you negotiate your way around the water filled maze in search of a box of flares, a compass and the exit.

Leave the tunnel network and you'll find yourself in a bunker during a night raid. Here's where those flares come in handy. Put them on and say "Hey man, give peace a chance." (Didn't you make a joke along those lines in the eight bit review? — Dep Ed). Actually you fire them in the air and kill everything that moves. Section five is a Gryzor style battle up the screen until you reach Sergeant Barnes' foxhole — the last section of the game.

Platoon gets progressively better, and no-one can deny that it's a tough and lasting challenge. The thing about the 16 bit version is that it fails to use the extra capacity of the Amiga. "Where's the sampled Tracks of my Tears then?" sniffed Gary Whitta, and I thought, yeah, where is it? Improved graphics and a few samples could have at least tarted this up some.

The first casualty of a conversion is innocence.

In an effort to squeeze every last ounce of mileage from the genre, Epyx have now released The Games — Summer Edition; sequel to the Winter Edition and the seventh in the Games series.

Based around the Olympic games (you know, the ones that were on too late to watch and were to anabolic steroids whet Mike Pattenden is to good taste) TG-SE lets you, or a group of up to eight people, compete in eight events. Springboard diving, veled-rone sprint cycling, hurdles, pole vault, essayetic parallel bars, rings, archery and the hammer throw are each loaded in separately from four sides of disk.

You know the score: each event can be practised on its own, or you can compete in any events you wish. Normal Games style control methods apply, with a mixture of joystick wagging and fire-button pushing in time to the animated characters. Some of the animation is a bit tatty, such as the hurdlers hobbling onto the track, but generally it's of a high standard. There are, thankfully, one or two innovations to the normal Epyx menu, in that the normally static backdrops have been spruced up by using camera angle-type viewpoints, and there's also some 3D perspective scrolling on the cycling and pole vault, adding some welcome variety in the proceedings.

The same cannot be said of the soundtrack, however, which is comprised of the usual pot pourri of boppy jingles — nothing bad, but nothing spectacular either.

The package is nicely put together, as avar, with a smart intro/outro sequences and a wordy manual which explains all the events in detail, together with hints for improved performance.

If TG-SE had been released a year ago, it would probably be heaped with acclaim and rated accordingly. Unfortunately, we've seen it all before. Apart from some slightly more interesting graphics, the game really hasn't progressed play-wise since Summer Games.

In fact, the interactive element has even been reduced on events such as the essayetic bars and the rings; the player merely selects the required moves and the gymnast comes out the routine flawlessly. Only the dismount depends upon any real skill or timing, and the remainder of the event plays like a multi-choice rolling demo.

The term 'flogging a dead (or at least severely ill) horse' springs to mind. If you've never seen one of the Games series, then you could give it a look — mind you, Epyx' Gold, Silver and Bronze compilations are available for £18 on disk, or £15 on cassette, containing no less than 23 events.

COMMANDO

Encore

Now here's a blast from the past. Commando was number 1 back in the Christmas of '85 which may or may not have been white, we can't remember. Anyway, a lot of people have grown old and died in the time it's taken for this to appear as a cheapie. A lot of clones have appeared too, and that's one reason you might not want to plump for what was really the first licenced arcade game.

That said it's good clean fun, and whilst the graphics are a bit small, the sound is good (great high score music) and the gameplay frenetic. (72%)

PROFESSIONAL SKI SIMULATOR

Codemasters

This game comes with the kind of accolades that might suggest that you could well save your money this Winter, cancel that skiing holiday in Bavaria and stay at home playing this. One mag (who shall remain nameless) is quoted as saying "it's just like being on the slopes." I mean, come on — it's not. It's like playing a budget skiing game. It doesn't hurt when you fall over, you don't get cold, you can't go far bit of après ski, and there's no chalet girls in piglets.

In fact PSS is a reasonable attempt at a ski sim with some nice background graphics and a very fiddly control method which will have you spending a lot of time doing things behind trees (not making yellow holes in the snow) — Ed and falling over. Fun in a sort of frustrating way. (65%)

Pro Skateboard Simulator

PRO SKATEBOARD SIMULATOR

Codemasters

"You gotta be cool not to SLAM!" it says here. Well I'm not sure about that. My Dad always got annoyed when I slammed the door. Still, this is a skateboard sim in the Codemasters tradition of nice background graphics and horrifically difficult controls. Try as you will (thp. look in a mirror and hold the stick upside down) your little skater won't go and pick up the blue flags.

This owes a fair bit to 720° but isn't as good. If you don't want to end up on tranquillisers don't buy it. (31%)

Ace of Aces

ACE OF ACES

Kixx

This was a CU Screen Star when it appeared and rightly so — it's stormingly good fun. Guide your Mosquito bomber through several sections of U-boat sinking, V-1 rocket destroying, trainbusting and jerry bosting in a completely absorbing WWII flying game.

Excellent graphics and atmosphere however can't make up for the problems involved when playing this game on tape, since there is much rewinding and fiddling with the tape counter to be endured if you want to play the full missions.

Nevertheless Ace of Aces is pretty good value compared to the price of lyches in your high street at the moment ... (72%)

Tenth Frame

TENTH FRAME Kixx

Access' ten-pin bowling simulation was received by some pretty decent reviews, and although two years old, it's still better than any of the other bowling games that have appeared in one form or another since.

Tenth Frame has some terrific animation (it's actually a digitized image of Roger Carver), some great sound effects, and a pretty realistic pinfall which makes it all the more gratifying when you get a strike. Can't be bad. (85%)

Pulse Warrior

CHEAP SKATE Silverbird

Zaxxon meets Skate or Die in this latest well-rad sporting 'sim'. The aim is simple enough: negotiate the diagonally scrolling street while avoiding the obstacles that litter the pavement. Dodge boxes and signposts, duck under bars and weave past fireballs in order to complete the course within the allotted time limit. That's about it really, scrolling's smooth, the animation is pretty limited, and the graphics are minimalist. Still, it's plenty of fun — and hardly taxing on the grey matter. Good title too. (61%)

PSI-DROID Zeppelin

Psi-Droid is a distant relative of Thing on a Spring, who bounces along in a convincing, if slightly annoying fashion, accompanied by a suitable clanking noise, inside a giant spaceship. The spaceship in question is large, inhabited by aliens, and on a collision course with Earth.

Psi on a Spring has to bounce around the flick-screen rooms and corridors of the vessel in order to find the pieces of a pulsebomb which were split into several pieces when Thing-droid was beamed aboard. Once the bomb is back in one piece, the ship can be vapourised and the Earth saved from a fate worse than almost anything else.

Along the way, Psi on a Droid encounters podules which can be collected for all manner of technological wonders, including a smart bomb and temporary indestructibility. There are transporters which allow access to the far flung corners of the ship, and an entertaining sub-game, where you are required to complete a small shoot 'em up for extra energy.

Plenty on offer here for blasters, mopaers, and arcade adventurers alike. You could do a lot worse than blowing three quid on this little package. (78%)

PULSE WARRIOR Mastertronic

Playing like a cross between Defektor and a flick-screen arcade adventure, Mastertronic's latest budget release is an odd one to say the least. As with all Mastertronic games, it's very polished with smart graphics and a smooth control system.

Cheap Skate

Unfortunately, it's a touch missing in the gameplay department: you have to direct your Pulse Warrior into the path of energy pulses that rebound around each screen, in order to deflect them into a large lens, which then re-emits them as one powerful beam. This may then be directed at the alien creatures that inhabit each screen, killing them and clearing that sector.

All very well and good, but in practice, the above task proves extremely difficult; the deflected pulses bounce off your warrior at random angles and it's more often a case of luck than any real judgement.

What with trying to avoid the deadly aliens, AND attempting to control several rapid and unwieldy pulses, the job in hand is a real toughie. Take a look if you like — but don't expect too much. (52%)

INTO THE

In the first of a new-look Valley, Keith Campbell takes a look at Ingrid's Back, (which has got to be better than her front — Ed.) ventures forth in time on a Chronoquest, and expounds upon the recent PC Show at Earls Court. But first, saviour for tormented souls in...

VALLEY RESCUE

What does an adventure player do with an onion and an umbrella? No, he doesn't do something disgusting to another player with them — certainly not if he's playing Beyond Zork, as is Coos Willemson of Zutphen in 'The Netherlands'. Coos wants to know how to get the relics in the chapel, and how to cross the bridge, as well.

According to some hints sent to me by a reader whose name I have long since lost, a raft is used to retrieve the canals of Phobos after the Royal Barge has traversed the route to the pole. However, Mr C. Mitchell of Thirsk, to whom I conveyed this news, has found Leather Goddesses Of Phobos singularly lacking in rafts. So a Zorklike 'Hello Sailor' to anyone who has twice sailed the waterways, and can help Mr Mitchell.

And 'Hello Sailor' to you, too, Alen. Yes, you know who I'm talking to, you with the missing 'L', from Eastney in Hants. Alen has been bating me recently, sending ever more difficult questions and challenging my ability to answer them. His latest gem concerns a game apparently about sailing ships from America. It's called 'Hans' Yemcats', writes Alen, and runs on a TRS-80. I know you used to have one, so I wondered if you could help? Fnuh, Alen! You say it's a TRS-80 game, but you wrote to Commodore User! You'll have to tackle the fellow who runs the Helpline in C+VG on that one...

When is an adventure not an adventure? When it is a Fantasy Role Playing game, that's when! However, the two types of game have a lot in common, so I'll break a rule and help Russell Emslie and others with the name of the Mad God, in Bard's Tale. Check the clues section, Russell.

Talking of role-playing games, here's a thought from Coos Willemson, back with a disjunctive statement. 'Lately, computer magazines publish more and more complete solutions, and maps of games (Bard's Tale I and II, Dungeons Master, Legacy of the Ancients, etc) that aren't yet released for all computer types. As an Amiga owner I have to wait several months before I can get such a game. In the meantime, I must lose those magazines and forget where, or I must just read the articles with my eyes closed. So please wait for us Amiga owners before publishing solutions of games.'

I never like to see a solution to a game that is less than a year or two old, but Bard's Tale I has been around a fair while Coos. What do other readers think?

Vornari is one of those adventures that everyone seems to find difficult, if not impossible, and no-one seems to know the answers. It certainly proves to be barren ground for Valley Rescuer, with many seeds sown, and very little reaped. Here's another one: Ace Melief from Rotterdam is having problems with the arrowmaniac. Can anyone advise what to do about him?

Who can clear Luc Styren, of Derchem in Belgium, from all blame, and help him through to the end of Dejà Vu? As well as being able to prove his Innocence, Luc would also like some directions to get through the maze in Uninvited, and a means of getting hold of the key carried by the little red demon. Check the clues on the last one, Luc!

Problems in an adventure? Know an answer someone else wants? Got something interesting to say about adventures? Then write to me at The Valley, Commodore User, Priory Court, 30-32 Faringdon Lane, London EC1R 3AU, and I'll get back to you.

CAMPBELL'S COMMENT

Just back from the PC Show at Earl's Court, in time to catch the November deadline with a rundown on the latest news and gossip from the world of adventure.

It was coming up to lunchtime on Thursday when I arrived. First place to visit must be Mediagene, said a rumbling from deep within me. So withdrawing the 'flight ticket' from my pocket, I headed over to the check-in desk, to receive my boarding card. After awaiting transfer in the VIP lounge I was to be 'flown' by Cadillac to The Inn On The Park, where Mediagene

The VIP lounge turned out to be an empty stand next to the check-in desk, where 'stand was the operative word. Seemed there was a delay — had the Mediagene air-traffic control computer gone down again? No, it was all down to flow control — traffic wasn't flowing very fast

VALLEY

In London that morning. So we were crocodile over the road to a minibus instead, for what was quite obviously a charter rather than a schedule flight, to Mediagenic's 'alternative' mini-exhibition.

Here Infocom were displaying a video of their future titles. Well, it didn't say a lot more than recent press releases, but I did gather that you C64 owners out there aren't going to be running them. Infocom have developed a new advanced parser and adventure system, which is too big for the 64. All new Infocom games will be written on it, and they will all have graphics. Diversification was also in evidence, with a demo of the forthcoming Battletech, a computerised version of the popular table top game. Very smart it looked too, and was 'bought in' from an outside software team, rather than having been developed in-house by Infocom.

Next door, Anna and Fergie were doing a roaring trade, and it was all I could do to catch a quick word. They were displaying their forthcoming Abstract Concept wares Parisian Nights. 'Much lighter than our last one,' promised Fergus, who, rather surprisingly, was still talking to me after my Mind-fighter review.

Further along, Manhunter, a new Sierra adventure was running. Sierra have developed their animated graphics system by taking out the animated figure and showing instead what would be seen through his eyes. This produces Cinematic effects like changing viewpoints, and split screens. Other goodies on the way from Sierra are Kings Quest IV, Space Quest III, and Police Quest II.

Back at Earl's Court it was time to meet Nick Walkland in the Press Room. Nick, a student who once produced the popular adventure fanzine 'Orcsbane' was in a holiday job editing the new club journal of Official Secrets, an adventure help and software club run by Tony Raibird. Nick wanted to write up a discussion on adventure between Mike Gerrard, Steve Cook, a couple of other jour-nos and myself.

Nick was extremely nervous at the prospect, and to get the conversation going, asked us why we wrote about adventure. Everyone answered unanimously 'The money!'

Upstairs in a private room, Microprose were having a little exhibition all of their own, which is where I met the author of a game that even beats King's Quest for endurance, Ultima V. 'Lord British' as he is popularly known, spent some time explaining how each new Ultima is a completely new game on a completely new system, so it doesn't retain the old technology like some other well-known series do. Obviously it pays off, too, for bar-talk had it that Lord British recently had a new house built on a mountain in the USA, with an astrodome, both indoor and outdoor swimming pools, a jacuzzi complete with waterfall, and, wait for it, a secret passage connected to every room!

Come the 'public' days, some familiar names and faces started showing up on the EMAP stand. People like a well-known Fiend from another magazine, like dentist and play-tester Hugh Walker who insisted on slapping anti-plague stickers on anything that moved, and like Allan Phillips, who must be the most prolific solution writer of obscure games in the whole of adventuredom.

A visit too, from Pat Win-stanley and Sandra Sharky, housewives and adventure addicts both, who are best known for creating the fanzine 'Adventure Probe'. 'Probe' changed their lives from mindless housewives into lively people, they told me. Computers were an ideal medium with which to work from home, fitting in the game-play and writing whilst the kids are at school. Pat now has her Patch, and Sandra her Sorcery, and they are planning a new club for the new year.

And then there was this guy who wandered up to the stand and asked: 'Any clues on Thans' Yoneats?'

'Now that's a coincidence!' I exclaimed, gullibly. 'I had a letter about that game only a few weeks ago, and I never heard of it before.' The evil smile that spread across his face gave me a very nasty turn, as it struck me that this was Alen Williams himself (see Valley Rescue, this issue).

I mentally voted Alen PC Show Valley Adventurer 88', and that evening took him for a meal in Chinatown for his sheer audacity, before he returned home to Thans Yoneats. Sorry, I meant Eastney, Hants. Ever been had?

CHRONO-QUEST

Psygnosis
Amiga: £29.95

The year is 1922, and you return home to the family chateau, with a letter from your missing father. An eminent scientist, he had designed and built himself a time machine, and travelled the world in centuries past.

Unfortunately, his unscrupulous servant, Richard, discovered the secret machine, stole the programs for the trip, and now your father fears for his life. His letter begs you to find Richard, for the very fact you are reading it probably means that he is dead, and Richard must be brought to justice for his murder. The time machine will have returned, so you can use it in your quest, following the routes that he took back in time.

Although the machine is in the chateau, it is well hidden and protected. An initial search of the chateau reveals some punched cards, and miscellaneous equipment that will hopefully be useful in your exploration.

The route to the machine seems to lie beyond the door under the dark staircase in the chateau's opulent hallway — but it's dark in there! Even when you manage to shed some light on things, the search does not get any easier! Although you are soon certain that you are only a step or two away from the machine, booby traps and secret mechanisms are likely to deter all but the most persistent and observant of adventurers!

However, once you have found the machine, and managed to activate it, you start off on your journey through time and space, in search of the villainous Richard.

Chrono-quest uses an icon-driven graphics system, with text replies, not unlike Mindscape's system in Unlimited. As well as movement icons for eight compass points plus up and down, there are fourteen more, including GET, THROW, DROP, TURN, EXAMINE, PUSH/PULL, LIGHT ON/OFF, USE, and HIT. The major part of the screen shows a picture of the current location, and the icons run in a narrow strip to the right-hand side of it. Below the picture is a text window for replies, that also shows INVENTORY icons when requested.

To move, click on a direction icon, and if you are unable to move in that direction, a text message will tell you so. To examine something in the picture, click on the EXAMINE icon, and then on the part of the picture you wish to examine, and any interesting details will be described. Taking an object removes it from the picture, and places it in the inventory list.

Reasonably enough there is a limit of 11 items carried, but strangely it is not possible to drop more than four items in any room, and even then they must be dropped in specific zones — 'horizontal quarters' is how the manual describes them.

A limited number of sound effects accompany the action, and the rest of the time, there is a deadly repetitive dirge, which is best turned right down.

Being of French origin, the English text replies, when not describing something examined are, at best, adequate, and at worst, meaningless. When I clicked on the LIGHT icon, for example, I got the message 'You don't have an object which will to blaze anything at all'. Sloppy.

Which brings me to another point. The areas on the picture sensitive to the cursor arrow are unpredictable in size. One minute EXAMINING an object will recognise something quite a long way from the arrow point. I got completely bogged down in one of the major puzzles, when, trying to use something in the correct way (although not realising it at the time) I got the reply 'It's not interesting'. Well so what! Never mind whether it is interesting or not — just DO IT!!! A half centimetre movement of the cursor, and it would have.

Having said that, the adventure itself has an interesting theme, with plenty of variety once you got the time machine moving. And it's BIG — the program comes on three disks, all of which are copyable, with a protection device in the packaging.

The old Squire is dead, and Jasper Quickbuck, the new resident at Ridley's End, has served eviction notices on the gnomes of Little Moaning and Gnottlefield. He plans to raze the old villages to the ground to make way for a vast marina and up-market housing estate. Ingrid is furious, and instigates a petition.

The trouble is, Ingrid can be such a pain that the local inhabitants sometimes go out of their way to avoid her. So, despite their opposition to the development plans, and the fact that they are about to be made homeless, signature collecting is no easy task for Ingrid.

Take her uncle, Dusty Halfyard, the miller. He audaciously fails to recognise Ingrid — even after all the trouble she's had getting past his killer chickens. Were they put there to keep out Quickbuck, or Ingrid?

There's plenty of signatures to collect, adding to Ingrid's list, and to your score. Jumbo Butterpat, landlord of The Green Gnome, will happily oblige, although some of his customers may not add their weight to the case.

Little Moaning is the title of Part 1 of this three-parter, and it has a range of problems from dead simple to quite tricky; enough to give the less experienced player sufficient encouragement and confidence to press on until the petition is complete, and ready to be presented.

Part 2, Steamroller At

Dawn, carries on the story, yet can be played without the need to transfer saved data, nor is any password required. Despite the success of the petition, Silas Crawley, Quickbuck's agent, has assembled a steamroller and a team of trolls, and has already flattened half the village. Now they are approaching Gnottlefield Farm, and will, unless Ingrid can find a way to delay or prevent them, demolish the buildings. Scarnus Sessmall, the local leprechaun, may give her a few ideas, but how can she put them into practice?

Ridley's End, Part 3 of the game, assumes a successful conclusion to Part 2, and has Ingrid appointed as a maid at Ridley's End, to seek out evidence that will be damaging to Jasper Quickbuck. Teaming up with her cousin Daisy, she sets about searching the mansion from top to bottom, from outside in, to do the evil Quickbuck down. Unfortunately, Quickbuck realises exactly who she is, and allows her freedom of the house in order to frame her later for the theft of his valuable antiques, which have mysteriously 'disappeared'.

All Commodore versions

INTO THE VALLEY

(Amiga, C64 disk and tape) have a memory save facility, so that the current position can be saved (until the computer is turned off) by the RAM SAVE command, as well as the usual disk or tape save option. OOPS is also available, and although this will only take you back one move on the C64, repeated OOPS will backtrack you a considerable way through the game on the Amiga.

The screen shots shown here are for the Amiga (C64 graphics weren't available at the time of going to press and graphics will only feature on the disk version) and are a completely new style for Level 9. Gone are the misty digitised pictures of Knight Orc and Gnome Ranger, that replaced Level 9's earlier, rather abstract graphics. Instead we have really crisp artist-drawn pictures.

These change in situ, but once displayed, can be pushed up and down the screen to uncover the text behind them. And once you've seen them all, the command WORDS will remove them altogether, PICTURES will bring them back and speed up the response.

The latter parts get harder and offer a greater challenge to the more experienced adventurer. But whatever progress, or lack of it, the player is making, he will be rewarded throughout the game with short commentaries on the reactions of the characters in his presence — often inconsequential, but nearly always amusing. In fact, I found Ingrid to be the most genuinely funny of Level 9's adventures to date.

Birthday

● Unless I am very much mistaken, the October issue was actually CU's 5th birthday. Wot — no big hullabaloo à la C+VG?

Anyways — the only two folk on the team then, that are still on the team now, are Mike Pattenden and Bohdan Buciak. In those days, CU catered for the serious user with a few games reviews thrown in. Nowadays it seems to be the other way round. The longest lasting column was/is, Tommy's Tips. The shortest, I think, is the Play to Win section. How about bringing back Happy Hacker, (possibly under new name?) Letter from America and Tried and Tested. How many people know that CBM have released a whole range of IBM compatible computers. A fact like this really ought to have been published in CU.

Good luck for the next five years.
Owen Birnie
Fosbarbers
Scotland

When you get to our age you try not to draw attention to your advanced years. Play To Win has been around yonks; the Last Word is the newest. We don't think IBM compatibles are too interesting. See you in another five years!

Observation test

● In F/A 18 Interceptor I have noticed that the supposed bug which Mike Pattenden mentioned in his review is not a bug, the plane is meant to float! Haven't you ever seen a floating F/A18?

However, there are some serious bugs, including:

- 1 You cannot find a car park to park your plane in downtown San Francisco.
- 2 You cannot go shopping.
- 3 You do not get mugged.
- 4 You do not get a ticket for exceeding the speed limit.
- 5 You drive through the bridges, not over them.

I have also noticed the following.

- 1 San Francisco is the quietest city in the world — not a single car anywhere — quite different to films.
- 2 San Francisco has the simplest structure anywhere — even more so than Thargomindah.

3 Demolition crews have flattened most of the city. Would it be possible to have some info on how to complete the 8th mission in F/A 18 Interceptor — the mission to sink the submersible aircraft carrier? (I have managed to hit it dozens of times, yet it will not sink).

Anthony Long,
Adelaide,
Australia

Thanks for you well-observed comments about Interceptor, but you omitted to or point out that San Francisco seems to be completely devoid of sandwich bars. You don't need to find a car park because parking restrictions don't apply to jet fighters. As for the enemy carrier — are you hitting the conning tower as advised?

Joy boy

● I was sitting at school one day thinking of something new for my 64. (what else do you do at school?), and the thought of a Joy-Wheel popped into my head. I've never heard of one, if they have existed before then they must be rare.

It's a simple idea, firstly I found a car, (anyone's apart from your own) cut off the steering wheel, and with a bit of fiddling around, I had left and right, as well as the fire button controlled. Meanwhile with the help of some springs and wood for an accelerator, it was driving madly at no danger to the public!

I guess it would cost £5 over in England, but it is worth the time, as it adds so much to games such as Test Drive and Out Run.
Peter Shields,
Engadine, Sydney,
Australia

Another helpful, handy hint from our readers. What a useful, inventive bunch you are.

Propaganda

● I have just read the September issue of 'Commodore User' an event which I normally look forward to. However, I feel I must register a protest. In the feature on football fanzines, I find reference to 'scummy NF propaganda' in the last column. I find this sort of writing not only of a gutter-level but POLITICAL — as are all the plugs for 'Anti-Sexism' (whatever that really is) which are scattered around the magazine.

Commodore Owner's buy 'CU' for computer and games related reasons and not for subliminal left-wing or any other kind of political propaganda. Let's please keep it that way ...

E. Morrison,
Lugset, Wakefield
It was a simple warning, but we take it you don't find NF propaganda scummy. Quite how this is 'gutter level' eludes us — maybe you think the Sun is serious reading. Anti-sexism is, put simply for you, an active stance opposing discrimination against women. There's nothing subliminal about CU, it's just sublime.

History

● I have just purchased your latest issue (October) and on reading the various 'news' items littered throughout the mag concerning the legendary Katakis-B-Type/Glenn Sisters/Super Mario Brothers debate, I felt I had to write.

Who the hell do Mediagenic think they are? Okay, so they've shelled out a multi-figure sum for the rights to B-Type, so what? Does that give the right to slap wrists on every horizontally scrolling progressive shoot-em up that gets released? If they want to cut a fine point over it, let's get back to basics please.

Cast your minds back to the weird and wonderful halcyon days when the video game industry was a mere youth, the days when you went to the nearest local only to find a teetering tower of ten pence pieces perched precariously on the fascia of perhaps the original shoot-em up — Space Invaders. Say what you will about the old duosaur, if Taito hadn't conceived that gem in the arcade star's crown, who knows what melange of pixels we'd be facing today.

All you devotees of the faith out there will know the evolution of the games we love and hold dear to our hearts today. From the humble Invaders, we had sequels and rip-offs galore.

It was when the immortal Scramble came onto the scene that the mould broke.

Instead of your ship being confined to the nether reaches of the screen, you now had the option to travel over weird and wonderful worlds, through tunnels, meteorite showers, swarms of alien craft and so on. The end objective was to reach an ultimate goal, the score was irrelevant. Then Konami took this principle and expanded it further in Nemesis, the original progressive shoot-'em up. Actually, Scramble had clones before Nemesis in the form of games such as Attack on Atlantis, but Konami can most rightly take credit for creating and developing the idea of 'powering up' your ship's weaponry.

Since then, Konami have taken that basic format and developed it even further with the introduction of Salamander, which gave players the option to play two-up at the same time. This was also the first game to allow 'auto pick-up' for the weapon icons, making it even easier to keep up the perpetual rain of shots in front of the players' ship.

Need I go on? If Medgenic are so sure that they are right when it comes down to slapping writs on every shoot-'em up on the market, perhaps somebody ought to tell Konami that R-Type (by previously unknowns IREM) owes a lot to Nemesis...

It makes my blood boil, especially as I have seen Katakis on the Amiga. Okay, so there are elements of R-Type in the game, but there are elements of many games in R-Type. From what I've seen of the Rainbow Arts game, if I was one of the programmers who conceived it, I would be most upset to say the least because as far as I'm concerned, the team who wrote it have created a masterpiece.

Perhaps Medgenic are frightened that R-Type won't be as good as any of the competition and they're worried about losing their money. Well all I can say is, what harm is a little competition?

We live in a supposed democratic society, surely it's up to the game buying public to decide. Look at Gauntlet, when that was released. Did the presence of games such as Druid, Storm, Phantom have any effect on its huge success - No Way José!!

I rest my case (and my computer keyboard).
Steve Gould
Stourbridge
West Mids

Medgenic has suffered in the past from rip-offs and it must be pretty galling if you've paid six figures for the licence. That said you rightly point out that one game takes a lot of inspiration from another. Perhaps Medgenic would like to give their view...

I picked up my Sunday tabloid trash - and there, right there, on pages four and five was 'Birthday Girl Linda Lusardi' celebrating her thirtieth birthday - which, makes her (once again) exactly the same age as possibly CU's greatest editor Eugene Lacey.

Just thought you'd like to know.

ALIENS WIN THE OLYMPICS!

Amazing ARMALYTE scoops world's top awards

EXCLUSIVE by HARRY BARSTOOL

'WHY ZETTLE FOR LESS when you can get as best?' That's the official comment on Thalamus' brand new bouncing bloater Armalyte - and it comes from Dr Manfred V Flypaper, president of Computer Research Associates plc.

Awesome Armalyte has won award after award and looks like being Britain's biggest WINNER at the Seoul Olympics, even though it wasn't entered for a single event!

Top sports experts say they're STUNNED by the magnificence of Armalyte on the tiny Commodore 64/128 and have given it their highest accolades!

ZZAP! voted Armalyte a Gold Medal with 97% (pages 24)!

A Commodore User spokesperson said 'look, obviously this game is so brilliant we'll give it a Super Star! I just you zittle about that?' Ed!

And Computer Gamesweek gave it a Fab award and a super staraway 93%!

Passion screams

And it's not only the experts who are raving - yes YOU the public have been screaming passionately for Armalyte after the EXCLUSIVE showing of the biggest blast since the big one at the Personal Computer Show!

A spokesperson for the crowd at the Thalamus stand told our reporter: 'Armalyte! Armalyte! Armalyte!'

Aliens in 'dromia

But aliens who attempted to invade the crowd and DISGUISE themselves as copies of Armalyte were thwarted by plucky PC Show security guard Bill 'Reg' Prescott.

Brave Bill battled for TWO AND A HALF minutes with the aliens after he discovered they were unable to wear their identification badges. 'Cos money giv', said a weary but proud Bill 'it's more than my job's worth losing them treatments without their badges man!' Instead, they turned up at a Commodore reception at London's posh Hippodrome night club and are now OFFICIAL Amiga dealers for Interstellar Zone Foz!

THE STAR SAYS: Britain needs more men like Paul Cooper! (shurely one uh enough? - Ed)

Dear Dr
F...

Every month Dr Manfred V Flypaper answers readers' problems. This month's star question comes from Thelma O'Wapping...

Dear Dr F, Last Christmas I got drunk at the office party and shall we say, bought an Amiga. I regret it now, but it seems to suit my boyfriend on and he always wants to, well, you know play Thalamus games on it. It has got to the point where he is pestering me to load it for him three times a day. I keep on telling him I haven't got any Thalamus games for the Amiga but he just won't listen and I am afraid there is something wrong with him. Is this normal? What can I do?

It's your lucky day, Thelma! Very soon Thalamus will release its brilliant Armalyte and Newberry on the Amiga, and you have your new titles on as yet: Xenodrome, Sam-boe, Hel and Search For Sherie. So I would say you would be something wrong in your boyfriend if he did not go crazy about the wonderful software! Do you have any questions or 10 REASONS STILL TO BUY HAWKEYE!

- ☆ It's really brilliant
- ☆ Hawkeye won a GOLD MEDAL in ZZAP!
- ☆ Play one level on this month's cover cassette!
- ☆ Hawkeye is the best arcade comb it game in existence!
- ☆ It's a snip £9.99 on Las-act!
- ☆ And only £12.99 on diskette plus FREE demo!
- ☆ 12 levels of manic action with gorgeous graphics!
- ☆ There are still more prizes to be won in the Gold Rush!
- ☆ It's NUMBER ONE in the Commodore charts! (Gallop!)
- ☆ That's ten, and no mistake! (Shere's one - Ed)

STOP PRESS - CORRUPTION SHOCK!

A rare minute investigation by The Thalamus Star has uncovered a shocking series of bribes in high places. Documents obtained by one sleuth team show that anyone - including Government ministers and senior Vatican officials - who sends Thalamus a cheque or postal order for just £9.99 can receive a cassette copy of Hawkeye or Armalyte! And the disk copy is a mere £12.99! The bribes are apparently made payable to Thalamus Ltd and sent to Thalamus at 1 Saturn House, Calleva Park, Aldermaston, Berkshire RG7 4QW.

Crazy Cooper skins baby from Saturn!

IN A SHOCK statement last night top Thalamus sources revealed that game-players now have the right to bare arms - with a super easy Thalamus T-shirt!

But there is a bomb-hush secret behind the trendy Thalamuswear - they are made from GREEN ALIEN SKIN!

Crazy Thalamus boss Paul Cooper denied it. I deny this said Cooper as snaky.

But The Thalamus Star has PROOF the label says 100% Combed Cotton - which means green alien skin in Cooper's entree code!

Bench party

Crazy Cooper claimed that the T-shirts are WHITE and not

GREEN. But The Thalamus Star has plucked a shurely dahcho-vered - Ed! a bottle of bleach in a cleaning warehouse near the Thalamus office.

And that proves that Cooper has been BLEACHING the green skin as looks whiter!

THE STAR SAYS: Will there ever be a special T-shirt offer soon?

GET A GRIP AND WIN AN AMIGA

Those celebrated joystick builders Powerplay rate their sticks so highly that they've told us there's nothing they'd like to see more than a whole lot of CU readers owning them, and one in particular having the chance to plug it into a brand new Amiga. It sounded like a pretty good idea to us.

So here's the deal: one lucky contestant on the CU gameshow Countaround Factor wins an A500, whilst 10 runners-up get their Instant Autofire Cruiser joysticks and a further ten runners-up get either a blue or a black Cruiser. So that's twenty runners-up prizes. Gripping stuff eh?

So how do you enter? Below you'll find seven categories we've created for the ideal joystick. What we want you to do is put them in order of importance:

- a) Autofire facility.
- b) Colour matches your wallpaper.
- c) Sound ergonomic design.
- d) Tough and durable.
- e) Suitable for both left and right-handed people.
- f) Eight-way directional micro switch circuitry.
- g) Five foot connecting cord.

First card out of CU's compo sack is from our own expert view wins the Amiga, then it's the next twenty who win the sticks. Answers on postcards only please to Powerplay Compo, CU, 30-32 Farringdon Lane, London EC1R 3AU.

Back in 1984 a comic puppet show appeared that made the muppets look like Punch and Judy. Its humour was mean, vicious, cruel, nasty and, best of all, completely indiscriminate. It held royalty, the Church, politicians, film stars and musicians in equal contempt. And it took the world by storm. Yes, the world. Spitting Image has appeared in specially made shows for the US, Canada, Australia, France, Spain and Italy. In Sweden the huge furniture chain Ikea uses likenesses of national celebrities. The Chicken Song went to number one, and a Ronnie Reagan 'Pet Hate' doggy chew mysteriously appeared in the White House. There are even plans for a Disney-style Spitting World.

Not even creators Fluck and Law can have imagined that kind of success when they registered the 'Spit 'N' Image' (sic) company and took up residence in a disused warehouse in London's Isle of Dogs. They're still there with a large team that works on a kind of puppet production line churning out those cruel caricatures. What's not so well-known is that the rubber dummies began life as plasticine models which were photographed and sold as postcards posters and illustrations for the media. The transition from solid models to bendy moveable puppets only happened after a painfully slow period of experiment, negotiation and fund raising, with, at one point, Sir Clive Sinclair putting money into the project.

Now the making of a Spitting Image puppet is a finely honed art, though still one which requires a good deal of time, care and money. The process begins with a caricature drawing which is normally done from a number of photographs from magazines and newspapers. Like any caricature it involves cruelly accentuating obvious features in people. Easy targets are things like Prince Charles' ears, Thatcher's nose, Jimmy Hill's chin, and the Pope's sloppy pontiff's pate.

These pictures are then laced up on a board and a clay model is fashioned into an evil likeness. Much of the work is handled by staff, but originally Roger Law used to work on the overall bust with

RUBBER SOULS

THE MAKING OF A

SPITTING IMAGE

With the funniest, rudest, crudest comedy since the Young Ones due to return to your TV screen for a new series and the prospect of a computer game from Domark appearing this side of Christmas, CU pulled a few strings to find out just how Fluck and Law make their spitting images. Mike Pattenden made the dummy run...

Bob Hoskins and Michael Caine — rubber Cockneys.

Michael Caine at the modelling stage. Not a lot of people know that.

Peter Fluck coming in and putting in the ugly creases and hideous warts that seem to disfigure most of their puppets.

Resin is then painted all over the finished figure to seal the clay so that the fibre glass mould it is used for doesn't stick. The mould is simply a negative of the face which leaves a seam along the middle of the head where it joins front and back. The puppets are either made from foam or latex set in plaster. The latter method is quicker, but the foam is much more durable. The formula is by the way, like Colonel Sanders secret recipe a closely guarded secret.

It's not a wind up when I tell you plastic surgeons have studied its potential. All that Fluck and Law will admit is that there are live chemicals in the recipe and the heads are 'cured' between 100° and 200° centigrade.

With the latex/foam puppet finally 'set', a bizarre looking unit is inserted into the skull. This is the eye mechanism and a cable extends down the spine allowing the eyes to be swivelled realistically.

The puppets are also painted and touched up with those individual characteristics which add to the grim realism of the whole model. Hence you have the dark spatters which make up Kinnock's freckles, or the unsightly drip which is Gorbachev's birthmark.

After that it's on to the wardrobe department where the puppets are dressed — often in clothes from charity shops. Most of the Cabinet, the official book says, is clad by the Spastics Society.

It's also here after a week's work in some cases that those final, loving touches are added, like the CND badges which appear on the Queen.

Control of the puppets is far removed from the traditional two-fingers-up Sooty's-bum technique practised by the likes of old Harry Corbett. Some of the puppets can take up to three people to control them, working the mouth, eyes and arms. It's no lie that it's so strenuous that weight training is necessary for some of the puppeteers.

You'll be able to see the puppets in action again on Saturday 29th October in a special, entitled Bumble Down: The Life and Times of Ronald Reagan based on that loveable old doddler (shame mistake here surely — Ed) in the White House. It's followed up by a new six episode series beginning a week later. Add that to the 'Spitting Image Comic Book' to be released shortly before Christmas and global domination beckons.

DON'T BE A DUMMY! WIN A

SPITTING IMAGE

You've read how the puppets are made, now win one of yourself. Believe it or not Domark are offering an extremely lucky person the once in a lifetime chance of having themselves ridiculed in latex. You'll be invited to the Limehouse studios of Spitting Image on Sat 17 Dec for a tour of the factory where you'll meet other winners from the magazine industry in a play off which involves your best impressions. Oh, by the way Michael Crawford saying "the cat did a whoopsy" no longer counts as an impression. Certain editors will be present and they'll be making fools of themselves too. Mind you some of them make a career of it.

Runners-up can expect to receive one of 20 Spitting Image books, ten videos and two utterly tasteless pairs of Spitting Image slippers. So how do you win? Well let's test your Spitting knowledge first:

- 1 Which regional TV Channel is responsible for putting out the programme?
- 2 What does the Thatcher puppet always dress in?
- 3 Which organ belonging to Ronald Reagan went missing one series?
- 4 What unpleasant habit does the Roy Hattersley puppet lapse into?

That was easy wasn't it? Now for a tie-breaker — tell us which puppet not yet created should grace the next series? Answers on a postcard to Spitting Compo, CU, 30-32 Farrington Lane, London EC1R 3AU. Compo closes Nov 18.

Welcome to the new-look tips section. To keep up with rest of the mag, Play To Win has had a bit of a re-shuffle, and now includes hints, tips, and maps plus POKEs from the now-defunct God-like Genius section. These are all bundled together now, so you won't have to go scouring the mag to find them.

From now on, both 64 AND Amiga games are featured, so any Amiga owners out there with hints, POKEs or maps should send 'em in. There's also a prize for the best entries, of a brand spanking new CU T-shirt, plus a hot piece of software for the Commodore machine of your choice.

So, no excuses — get writing, drawing and poking. The address is PLAY TO WIN, Priory Court, Farringdon Lane, London EC1R 3AU. To lock off, here's a Thundercats listing for all those Amiga owners with two drives or a 1Meg machine — well, there's bound to be one.

1. Make a backup copy of your TC (Thundercats) disk on to a blank disk.
2. Relabel your backup copy to "THUNDERCATS-CHEAT"
3. Load AMIGA BASIC.
4. Type in the listing printed below.

5. Save the listing on disk.
6. Run the program.
5. To use the cheat version of TC follow the instructions for either 2 drives or for 1meg:

2 Drives

1. Reset your computer and put your original TC disk in drive DF1: (end your TC backup in DFO:)
2. TC will now load and run.

1Meg

1. From your workbench disk copy L: RAM-HANDLER to your TC backup disk and also copy C: CDPY to your TC backup disk.

2. Change the file STARTUP-SEQUENCE on your TC backup disk to read "CDPY C:THUNDER RAM:" and press RETURN.

5. After a short time you will finally be able to play your cheat version of Thundercats.

Thanks to David Slack of Kent for that one.

BACK TO THE FUTURE

We had a cry for help from Dr Rochelle last month, who couldn't get past 'PRESS PLAY ON TAPE' with Back To The Future. It just so happens that someone sent in the entire solution. Unfortunately, his name has gone missing. But thanks, whoever you are...

Give the Love Pouns to George. His picture turns green and he will then follow you. Take him to the hall, and freeze him with a guitar.

If Lorraine is not in the hall, go and find her — she follows you automatically. When you enter the hall, walk past George and pick up the guitar. As Lorraine walks past George and touches him, freeze her with the guitar.

The tumily picture on the right now starts regenerating, and continues until the guitar wears off. Rutter than wait around until this happens, go to the coffee shop and wait. Biff soon appears. Give him some coffee; this freezes him and keeps him out of your way for a while. Go back to the hall. If Lorraine and George start moving, then repeat the process as above.

Once the picture is complete once more, go to the Doc's house. Enter, then exit, and the sports car whisks you back to the future. Easy, really.

MODULES/ROOMS:

Rooms are of increasing difficulty, starting with module 1 (at 12 o'clock) getting harder up to module 6 (clockwise).

In module 3 all items on the floor are hidden and so a robot with a built in Geiger scanner is essential. In module 4 all floorboard radioactivity is hidden and so a Geiger scanner is again essential, although any robot can collect a scanner in the room itself and use it. Lazere are dis-lighting point with one droid, then use the other for the clearing operation.

GAMEPLAY AND GENERAL TIPS

1) Barrels of coolant fluid reduce temperature by an amount proportional to the actual temperature. Thus the higher the temperature, the greater will be the effect of sending a barrel down a chute. You may therefore find it a good idea to store up barrels near chutes, until the temperature gets rather high.

2) Temperature increase rate is linked to puzzle difficulty and entropy. To minimise this rate, keep entropy as low as possible and only tackle more difficult rooms when you have discovered sources of coolant barrels.

3) Energy cells increase year TOTAL energy by 1000. The maximum level of total energy is 20000 and consequently there is no point in taking any until year total energy has been depleted to at least 19000 (this depletion takes place during robot recharging).

4) In addition to this total energy, each robot starts a level with its batteries full. Therefore, to make full use of your energy supply, as well as many different robots as you can.

5) Touching a Quadralien will drain a robot of 1/16 of its energy and is consequently to be avoided. Where such contact cannot be avoided, as a robot with a low energy status to minimise loss. Marina and a blue Quadralien will, of course, be mutually repellent and therefore their energy drain in such situations will be vastly reduced. With Spud, however, things are reversed — he will attract red Quadraliens and is consequently more susceptible to energy drain.

Now press t4, which takes you straight to the village. Go to the far left hut and collect the torch from the round pot. Now go two huts to the left and collect the map after shooting the guard. You can now go to the next hut on the right, abled in this room so wits and intelligence are most important.

Module 5 is in darkness although the lights will come on when a robot sits on a lighting point. This it may be a good strategy to start off by looking for a

Taking on the zeppelin

Make sure you don't blow your tires to Jane.

Having trouble defeating the Hun?
Having a Nazi experience?

Gary Whitta has finished Rocket Ranger, so we picked his brains.
Not very much there, but still . . .

THE WAR ROOM

Your main priority in the War Room is to find either one (though preferably both) of the two Nazi Lunarium plants. Until you find these, there's absolutely no way you'll be able to complete the game. At the start, remove your agent in Germany and place him, along with the other four, in assorted countries in Africa (ag Egypt, East Africa, Kenya, South Africa) as one of the Nazi bases is nearly ALWAYS there, somewhere. If an agent finds a rocket base, immediately remove him and reposition him elsewhere. The same goes if they find something like a brainwashing plant or if they tell you about lunarium traces or Nazi radio signals.

Don't spend more than 10 whole months at the Fort. If you still have not found the base after 10 months, abort and try again. As soon as you find the Nazi base, organise resistance and fly straight to it. If one of your agents is caught, just carry on. If you lose more than two, restart. NEVER order agents to maintain a high profile as they nearly always get caught.

THE NAZI FIGHTER PLANE GAME

A bit of a toughy at first, but easy enough when you know how. Always keep Cody positioned so that you can see his back and not his belly. With your finger holding down the fire button, stay near the bottom of the screen and wait for the fighters to appear. When they do, manoeuvre so you are directly below them and let them have it. If you're lucky you'll come out unscathed.

ROCKET RANGER

THE ACK-ACK GAME

Attacking the Nazi Lunarium base is a piece of cake. Just avoid the flak (a dodgie) and remember to fire slightly prematurely at the gun emplacements to allow the Lunarium to spread once it has hit the ground.

HAND TO HAND COMBAT

Simple really, just punch the guard in the head when he blocks to his body. You don't need to block yourself until about the third fight. Keep punching relentlessly and you'll emerge victorious.

THE TEMPLE SHOOTOUT

Keep pulling down on the joystick to keep Cody covered while the machine guns are firing. When a window opens, rush over so you are directly below it and open fire (you get about three seconds before it fires). When all the windows have been knocked out, a door in the centre opens to let you in.

THE ZEPPELIN

Fly out to the Atlantic (easy enough) and you intercept the zeppelin automatically. On the first screen, concentrate solely on blowing away the rocket torpedoes. You can't hit the zep at this range so don't try yet. On the second screen, fire a few ranging shots before you attack and then try to hit the canopy below the main airbag (try to allow for the bobbing up and down of the zep). If you succeed, the canopy flashes green and you are taken inside to meet the prot and Jane. The correct answers to Jane's questions are:

- 1-I'm on a mission from god.
- 2-I'm only just warming up.
- 3-You'll never believe me (or words to that effect).

THE FINAL SHOOTOUT

Reeeaaaally tough is this one. Keep on firing (only duck when absolutely necessary) because the final game is played to a very strict time limit (due to your eyesight being weakened by the large quantities of Lunarium). The female lunar slappas fire directly down at you, making aiming very difficult. The trick is to fire on them before they get a chance to attack, ie while they're sliding down the ropes. There are plenty of zombies to waste so don't hang about.

Basically, you'll have to rely on practice and good luck but these should sort you off on the right foot.

A LEGEND IN GAMES SOFTWARE

FOXY Fights Back

YOUR ESCAPE MAP

Andrew Braybrook has been dragged away from his current ST project (faint cries of 'traitor' in the background) long enough to put dot matrix to printer and cursor to pixel, in order to bring you some hints 'n' tips on his latest game. Intensity. Take it away, Mr B...

INTENSITY

Intensity is a fast arcade-style game featuring 78 levels or screens and a duel craft mode. The levels are arranged in a 5 x 16 matrix and are linked by one-way exits. Not all exits are present so only certain paths are available to lead you from the start screen on the left to one of the five final screens on the right. Since there are a large number of different routes possible plan out your route carefully based on which shuttle you intend to reach and whether you are just trying to get there or are playing for points.

Any one route could take you through anything from 20 to 30 screens. You have only 50 time segments in which a new craft may be bought, although the game continues beyond that segment. Thus if you choose an inefficient route then new craft may not be available in the later stages. However, accomplished players may try to pick the longest route deliberately and buy as little as possible to collect all the bonus points from having 99 RU in the bank.

SKIMMER CONTROL

Controlling the shimmer and drone is fundamental to mastering the game. All the objects in the game cast a shadow onto the surface of the platforms. You can use these shadows to judge the height of various ground features and also the height of the spores and trachers flying above the surface. The drone has a maximum flying height which only has impact after about layer six where high walls are present; The drone must be guided around such obstacles. The three different grades of skimmer behave differently. The gamma skimmer is slow and must avoid many tall obstacles as its maximum flying height is very low. It is imperative that you keep a close watch on the grade of your skimmer and assess quickly where it can fly.

Try to keep the shimmer away from the drone as much as possible. A warning sound is made if the two are too close.

The colonists should be picked up quickly. As time goes by the pace of the whole game accelerates; the time spent on the current screen is taken into account as well as the overall time segment. Try to land the drone in a place where colonists from more than one airlock can reach it, preferably with as direct a route as possible.

ALIENS

The alien mutations should be dealt with at the earliest opportunity. They become more dangerous as they mutate. The spores are naturally afraid of the shimmer and tend to move away from it. They may be chased into the corners or onto the drone to kill them. Although there are no belts in the game, ramming the aliens does kill them quite effectively. The stalhers must be dealt with immediately as they look around for a colonist and give chase if close enough. Since the colonists are heading for the drone they are usually near to it. Should they be caught, avoiding the resultant neutron will be virtually impossible. Neutrons take a zig-zag path to the drone. On early layers they move in wide sweeps and may miss they will not miss on later ones. The podulo mutation is the best chance to destroy the alien before it becomes a tracher. Once it's mutated into a tracher, it will lock onto one of your craft, usually the skimmer, but as time goes by they realise that the drone must be destroyed also. The tracher chases its target relentlessly, and can avoid many obstacles by flying round or over them. Eventually it will burn itself out if it does not reach its target.

Mutations may be destroyed by other methods than ramming them. The 'R' symbols released from the exit destroy all mutations except the neutron, self-destructing in the process. Only the bonus key can destroy a neutron, but this is quite a sacrifice. Two aliens also destroy each other, so steering round a spore whilst being chased by a tracher could cause the two to collide and be destroyed.

TACTICS

It is best to begin playing the game by attempting to reach the epsilon or delta shuttles. Do not stray onto beta or alpha platforms, all of the aliens and the bonuses move slower on this side of the station. As you move nearer to the shuttles the maximum number of aliens increases, as does their flying height, so they begin to be able to clear high obstacles. It is also more likely that a bonus key will appear instead of an 'R' symbol. Only one will appear per platform and it is a very valuable item to collect. As time segments pass the spores spend less time before dropping to the surface as stalhers; the stalhers tend to stand still rather than jump around aimlessly when they cannot see a colonist; the colonists' air supply shortens; the trachers live longer; and the neutrons live longer.

As time passes on a particular screen the bonus symbols last for less time, more aliens appear, and everything else speeds up.

Reaching a shuttle ship and completing layer 16 allows all rescued colonists to board the shuttle before it launches. Each final screen features a different 'mobile text font' and the shuttle is named. Determined players who reach all five different shuttles in one game session will see a bonus screen with the splash effect text font.

Never leave it to the last minute to replace a destroyed craft. The 'auto' function in the buying phase always recommends that you have at least 3 of each type of ship ready for use. Alpha craft are best to use, Alpha craft are best to buy if you can afford it, and they are cheaper on the epsilon side. Gamma craft should only be bought as a last resort as a stop-gap while waiting for another better craft to be built. On later layers an alpha skimmer is essential to navigate the many wells present.

Highest scores are achieved by visiting as many platforms as possible, with as many on the alpha side as you can and by saving your money. Once 99 RU are in the bank and your alien alpha ships, then bonuses really start to mount up. My top score to date is 369,500, reaching the alpha shuttle. Good luck!

The tank controls allow for fairly precise turning and direction changes during the whole landscape to either impressively as you take evasive action ahead for a fish target. The omniscient turning and directional shifts are also intuitive, increasing when your tank attempts to make its way across rocky ground.

Apart from the obvious in-lift forward and backward drives and left and right hand wheels, the controls also allow you to bank precisely, redefining your target area and even do a wheelie. If you attempt this last manoeuvre while simultaneously squeezing the fire-

IREM

3 x 10p

A pretty classy piece of work in the martial arts hack'n'blast, as you might expect from the creators of R-Type. Spirit Ninja starts as a samurai reeking his way through a beautifully drawn landscape peopled with a variety of enemies of similar graphic quality.

There are three buttons as well as joystick control: a fire button, a weapon choice button and a jump button. The weapons on offer are a sword, nunchuks, axes and a long extendy-chain thingy à la Black Tiger.

You start off in a temple, bowing before the statue of some great behind. With the maximum of three of these characters in your wake the game starts to get really interesting.

As you proceed through swamps, forests and temples, you and your spirit buddies es counter increasingly tough foes, everything from beautifully-realised Chinese marketeers to enormous super-buocaneers with huge cutlasses, spider-ninjas who leap from trees and waffle at you, and hounds which bound through the air.

The first of the super-buddies, the huge fire-spitting buddha, isn't too tough to deal with but by the time you get to the above-described pirate swordman not even your trio of protective, warth-like comrades can save you if your fire, select and jump timing is even minutely off.

Spirit Ninja really is an impressive deity. This ceremony completed you set out along a boardwalk. Pretty soon baddies start coming at you from all sides, some creeping up behind you, others jumping down from the ceiling and walls, and one who even tries to stab you from under the floorboards. For each of the enemies you face in the game one weapon will be more appropriate, and, believe me, the weapon choosing button has to be hit very quickly and accurately if you want to survive.

After you kill certain baddies they leave behind glowing jewels. Some of these are used to increase the might of your weaponry. Others, however, have a much more unusual effect: they cause a slightly transparent replica of yourself to appear and troop along behind you. This has the effect of increasing your fire power and also giving you a shield. Like Mary's little lamb, these boys shadow you, doing exactly what you do, just a few paces

Black Tiger-style game. Irem have taken absolutely no short cuts in graphics and the gameplay is simply brilliant. I would say that if you're short of a few bob, Spirit Ninja's probably not the best idea for long-lasting entertainment. Getting the hang of the controls is all-important, and takes time and plenty of cash.

But, that said, you should definitely have a look at this game. If you feel you can't afford the investment in coinage, at least look over the shoulder of somebody else richer than you as they're trying their luck.

The scenario finds you behind the wheel of a speedy squad car, receiving your radio orders from Nancy at H.Q. At the start of each mission, she identifies a vehicle containing a suspect for you to hunt down. She remains ever calmly apathetic.

Once you've received orders for your first mission, you're off yourself down the highway. You've got thirty seconds to meet with a vehicle to locate the suspect's runaway vehicle. It involves guiding your way at high speed through the winding city roads and off onto rivers, over and through trees and telegraph poles. Naturally, as you approach a wall or a whirl, turns to take in order to find the addy swiftly.

After you've successfully located the suspect, he'll want to go further. You've seconds to follow him to pull over so you can clip the offender in traveling along at high speed on a no easy task. Hitting other cars or Even more fiendishly, as the

...the sounds are good too, though, have to confess that the racket your own siren makes from the second you sight your quarry until you have his hands handcuffed behind his back began to grate fairly shortly.

Chase H.Q. has everything a good drive-along should have, and quite a bit more besides. Even without the challenge of the chase, the driving act on is excellent, with the car actually lifting off the ground when it goes over bumps and handling well throughout. When you add the run 'em off the road hot pursuit action, well, what more could you ask for.

Although the version played was in bright day, I'd be surprised if Taito don't also bring out a deluxe sit-in version, which should add even more thrills and spills.

A hit, or, if not the Ed's quart of transton pickle, par and all.

DALEY'S OLYMPIC CHALLENGE COMPO

In a huge response to our 'send a sweaty sock compo' apart from the normal (or abnormal postcards) we did in fact receive three suitably sweaty socks, which Nick 'bell, they don't match' Kelly is now wearing (one on each foot).

Peening back through the mists of time you could well see the questions to which the answers are 1, Munich (1972). 2, Moscow (1980) 3, Ban Johnson (whoops) 4, Los Angeles (1984).

In all there were twenty six winners pulled out from Mike's extremely large hat, and they are:

The entire Adidas kit goes to J C Stanley, Whistable, Kent, and a pair of Adidas trainers (as worn by Daley) and a copy of the game will sprint its way to these lucky peeps:

Mr B Bowman, Sutton; Stephen Chapman, Staffs; Richard Gray, Norwich; Richard Walker, Dudley; Mr K. Palmer, Kings Lynn.

A copy of Daley's Olympic Challenge will soon find itself booted up on the computers of these people: Richard Clarke, London; Richard Dixon, Hemel Hempstead; Daren Flack, Bucks; Stephen Goodsell, Harpenden; Dean Preece, Burton-on-Trent; James Hopkinson, Shirebrook; Mark Gelsworthy, Bristol; P Wagnun, Billerica; Jubar Mufazzil, London; Adrian Kumar, Southgate; Stewart Watson, Strathclyde; Ronald Koakstra, Holland; Robert Shleght, Dronfield, Nypros Ioannidas, Nicosia; W Hay, Ryton; Stuart Farmer, Franhamp; Jamie Gosse, Southampton; Simon Watson, Chingford; Barry Brice, Belfast; W Hill, Taunton

NINJA 2 COMPO

Though my suggestions for an all-out Ninja survival-of-the-fittest bash was in fact ruled out, you were asked to de-moose the title of four Bruce (what drugs?) Lee films. And if you care to glance back to our August issue the answers in Alphanumeric order are, Dragon, Dragon, Boss and Fist. Now to clarify things even further here are the winners

The lucky sod who wins the Amiga is Miss R Kauser,

Erdington, Birmingham

And the 25 copies of Ninja 2 shall be shortly wandering their way to this motley crew: Geir Friestad, Norway; David Brown, S Humbs, Mark Ouwendijk, Holland; Paul Chambers, Kiddemans-ter; B Rosa, Wallisbourne; Michael Latimer, Worsnop, Cecil Dyer, London; Noli Jame, Daventry; K W Tsang, Hemel Hempstead; William Stingley, Sidcup; Sean Low, East Tilbury; Mr L Thomas, Mid Glamorgan; Kevin Baity, Corsham; John Balloon, Blackburn; Karl Partridge, Cockett; David Croyall, Burton-on-Trent; Anthony Wood, Ongar; Stephen Smith, Arnold; John Doe, Broad Oak; Robert Smith, Birmingham; Steve Rookes, Middlesbrough; Nigel Wood, Brafton; James Meaden, York; Tae Sun Chee, Northolt; Terry Lambourne, Peacehaven

Hmm, what I need...

SNK 3 x 10p

P.O.W.

PO.W. stand, as any rule kno, for prisoner of war. In this militanistic beat 'em up from SNK, you start off in a cramped cell in a P.O.W. camp. But not, of course, for long. Pretty soon you've made your way through your cell door and are pitting your martial arts skills against the camp guards.

Initially, these are, like yourself, unarmed. Relying on their bare fists and feet, they run at you from both sides of the horizontally-scrolling screen. Of course, they're not much of a match for a cell-hardened fighting machine like yourself, a swift couple of kicks or punches will fell these wimps.

Your controls consist of the joystick, a jump button and an attack button which produces an array of kicks, punches and elbow jabs when used in conjunction with the joystick. All pretty standard, really. There's also a two-player option, so you don't have to take on the guards all by yourself.

And a helping fist or two soon becomes a very attractive prospect as the going gets tougher, with the arrival of knife-bearing commandos, grenadiers and riflemen. Here the similarities with the new wave of beat 'em ups like Double Dragon become evident, but if you succeed in flooring the better of one of these weapons, the hardware in question falls to the ground and can be picked up by you. Of course, if you yourself get a drubbing you drop it once more.

Towards the end of the level an armed helicopter drops in a team of crack commandos to sort you out — these characters require a serious amount of kicking about to be destroyed. If you manage to get past them, bud, you're a free man.

Of course, the story doesn't end there. With out so much as a press conference, the newly freed you're back in action against the enemy, this time breaking into his property instead of out. P.O.W. doesn't break many rules: it's a good solid beat 'em up with reasonable graphics, fairly faithfully following in the footsteps of the likes of Double Dragon and Renegade. The controls are smooth and the sound effects, in particular, are excellent, a successful kick or punch resulting in a satisfying

"THWOKKKK" accompanying the elimination of your foe.

Not a frontier crosser by any means but no doubt it'll go down just fine with those many fans of coin-op flatpuffs that throng the arcades around the land.

Hold on to your stomach whilst we go Mach 3 with next month's cover exclusive. Afterburner was one of the biggest coin-ops of the year and it's a definite contender for the Christmas number one slot. We print the first reviews on 8 and 16 bit.

AND THERE'S ALWAYS...

Coin-ops. We got them first. Last year's hottest arcade games are this year's Christmas software releases, but what about the games that are set to blow us away in '89? We sent Nick Kelly to Japan for the annual JAMMA show and he returned bearing many gifts.

NOT TO MENTION...

The hottest, most up-to-date tips for 64 and Amiga alike. There's another arcade map, a playguide by programmer John Cummings to Soldier of Fortune, plus a definitive guide to the Last Ninja II. All that for $1.20, plus the best read since Will Shakespeare put monkey to typewriter. See you November 26th...

Wipe out

● I own an A500 and wonder if you can assist me with the following.

1. I have had some trouble with my master disks. I have occasionally forgotten to leave the 'write protect' tab set. Consequently I have accidentally destroyed the contents of the disk. I have considered buying the Master Disk II. Do I need an extra external Disk Drive or can I use my internal one only?

2. Could you tell me if there is a Software Huring Company which caters for Amiga Software and, if so, could you recommend one.

Matthew Paine,
Southampton

One of the first things in say to all owners of an Amiga (or any other computer for that matter) — NEVER USE THE MASTER DISKS FOR ANYTHING OTHER THAN TAKING A COPY FOR ACTUAL USE. It is tempting fate to use the Master copy of any program, unless of course it is copy protected (a curse on their houses!) which prevents legitimate backing up and therefore encourages bad habits.

Games are the one understandable area for copy protection, but there is no excuse for not taking a back-up of the Workbench disk and any other 'business' programs such as WP and databases. Always lock the masters away in a safe place and then you will always have a back-up in case of overwriting, corruption, disk failure or even virus attack. If however, this advice is too late, contact the dealer from whom you bought the Amiga and he may be able to obtain a replacement copy of Workbench etc. If it is a commercial program you have overwritten, get in touch with the suppliers.

As for Marauder II I would be most surprised if it didn't run with only one disk drive. Indeed if you only have 512k RAM then some programs will not run if you have the second drive connected. Having said that, installing a second drive on the Amiga saves a lot of unnecessary disk swapping, and with some drives as low as £47 is really worth the extra. Finally, I am not aware of any company hiring out Amiga software (especially when considering the cost of setting up such a concern and the current pressure against hiring).

Reference

● I have owned a 64 for quite a long time and know quite a bit about programming it. As a reference guide I use the Programmer's Reference Guide by Commodore.

However, now I am looking for something a little more extensive. For example, the other day I saw an Atari 800, with a 2 lorhes-thick User manual. Is there anything similar for the C64?

B. Worth,
Harrigate,
N. Yorks

If you want some comprehensive 'notes' for the 64 I would suggest one of the many well laid-out books for the 64. The Programmer's Reference Guide tends to give you the information rather than explain how to perform certain functions. One of the best all-round books is the one by Ray West: 'Programming the CBM 64'. This is about 600 pages of solid information with many explanations and examples covering just about every aspect of the 64. However, there are several other books around, most of them specialising in one or two particular aspects of the 64 such as sound or graphics. If you want something detailed about only certain aspects of the 64, then phone a company such as COMPUTER MANUALS LTD on 021 706 6900 for their catalogue. Ray West's book can be obtained from most bookshops (ISBN 0-9507650-2-3) and is published by Level Ltd (Computer Publications) the publisher's distributors he contacted directly on 0403 710971 if you have difficulty obtaining a copy.

Bits and bools

● How do you read and write to the various 'bits' of an address in the C64's memory (eg how can I read bit 4 of the decimal location 56321)?
Michael Grimwade,
Qld, Australia 4355

In order to read specific bits in a memory location you must 'mask out' the bits that you don't want using the Boolean AND statement. The following example shows how to read bit 4 of register 56321: IF (PEEK(56321) AND 16) THEN GOSUB 2000. This would cause the program to GOSUB to a routine at line 2000 only if the five button on was pressed. Note that bit 4 is actually the fifth bit of the 8, since normal convention is to number the bits 0-7. To read any of the other bits you replace the 16 by the appropriate number as follows:

Number — 1 2 4 8 16 32 64 128

Bit No — 0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7
To write to a single bit you must use the Boolean OR statement, so to SET bit 4 of a memory address (to 1) use the following format: POKE 56378, PEEK(56378) OR 16 (sets Data Direction Register to make line 5 an output line). To UNSET bit 4 (to 0) use AND again: POKE 56379, PEEK(56379) AND (255-16). To set and unset any other bit in an address, replace the 16 in each case with the appropriate number as shown above.

Colour printing

● I am going to buy an Amiga 2000 and I would like some advice on printers. I would like to buy a colour printer which would print colour graphics equally well as text. I've heard of the OKI MATE 20 which prints colour graphics extremely well, but is not really all that good for printing text. Also, would there be any colour printers for the C64 which could print good quality colour graphics and text?

I would very much appreciate your suggestions.
Michael Gervus.

One of the best 'value for money' printers on the market just now has to be the STAR LC-10C colour printer. This is available in either Centronics input or Commodore serial-IEEE input. For the £2000 (or any other micro with a Centronics printer port) get the standard version. This uses a 4 colour ribbon rather like the Epson LX-80 and can produce quite good colour graphics. It also has a perfectly acceptable NLQ mode, which can also be used in colour if required. For straight pictures, I have to admit that the OKIMATE-20 does produce some very good results, but using it for text not only reveals its limitations, but goes through ribbons at a remarkable rate.

No dot-matrix printer, such as the LC-10C, is going to quite match the quality of the OKI for pictures, but compromise is the name of the game. The Star printer is certainly much more useful for everyday printing and has many useful features such as 'paper parking', single sheet feed and a choice of fonts. Prices vary from around £230-£270 depending on where you buy, but beware that all Japanese printers are about to rise in cost due to the recent EEC levy which has been imposed.

Disabled burglar

For a school project I am working on a burglar alarm based on a C64, using the joystick ports.

The problem is that when a joystick switch is in the 'on' position, the keyboard cannot be used properly. I wondered if there were any pokes to disable and enable the joystick ports to stop this problem (I am using Simon's Basilist). Your help would be very useful.

Nicholas Marsh,
Sutton Coldfield

Really the joystick ports are not ideal for what you are trying to do. As you have discovered, the joysticks use the same registers as the keyboard scan routine and there is no simple way of resolving this problem. Even if you could 'disable' the joystick ports this would mean that you might miss a potential alarm situation. In addition, there is no way of getting output from the ports to trigger an external alarm or signal.

The best method of using the C64 for a burglar alarm is to use the User port. This gives you 8 lines, any of which can be configured as either inputs or outputs. The Data Direction Register at address $6578 determines which way the lines are set, each bit in the register corresponding to a line on the port. If a bit is SET then the line is an output; UNSET means an input. The actual port address is at $6577 and pins C-1 are the connections for the 8 lines (on the bottom side of the PCB connector). The 0v and 5v lines are pins 1 and 2 respectively (top side of board), but note that the maximum power drain from this port is 100mA! Use relays, a Darlington Driver chip or TTL chips to switch anything larger.

If you don't already have a copy, try to get hold of the Programmer's Reference Guide for the C64; this will help you enormously in setting up and using the User port for such a purpose.

Printer compatibility

I have just bought an Amiga A500 and I also own a Commodore 64. 6 months ago I also purchased a Star NL10 printer for my 64. I would obviously like to use this printer with my Amiga. Is this at all possible or do I have to save and buy a new one? Mark Mendoza, Hitchin, Herts Provided the NL-10 has a standard Centronics input then you have no need to worry. All you will need is an Amiga-to-Centronics printer cable, connect the two together and set 'EPSON FX-80' in the Preferences set-up. If you purchase a 2-way Centronics data switch then you can even have both of your computers connected to the printer and simply switch between them as necessary.

Even for printers with only a Commodore serial-IEEE input, it is not lost. By using a cable and software package from TRI LOGIC called 'Amiga Print Link' you can use the C64 as a printer buffer for the Amiga. With this package, you leave the printer attached to the C64 and connect the C64 to the Amiga. TRI LOGIC are on 0274 684289.

Fooled

A few months ago, I saw an article about a device for the C64 called the Amulot. It was a hardware device which plugged into the user port of the C64 and fully emulated the Amiga 500, including the 512k of memory. It also enabled the use of the 1541 to store Amiga programs. The article said that it was made by a group from Sweden who had investigated the major functions of the Amiga's RAM and put it in a box for the C64. I was wondering if you have heard of this device, and if you have, could you please tell me what you know about it, and give me an address I can write to about purchasing it. I would be grateful for any help you can give me on this matter. Simon Robinson, Victoria, Australia

You've been had I'm afraid. The 'Amulot' was an April Fool joke in Zzap! and you fell for it like the sucker you are. The C64 just cannot reproduce either the graphics or the sound that make the Amiga such an amazing machine.

A lot of water has passed under software's rotten bridge since we last spoke. There's been goings and coming, comings and goings. Take Steve Jarratt for example, the Kevin Turvey of the software world, who has joined CU as its deputy editor. And then there's that young whippersnapper Mark Patterson who's joined the copychasing dept.

● The big event of the year came and went. No not Nick Kelly getting his round in, but the PC Show. As usual it was accompanied by revelry and carousing of hideous extremes.
